Power Is Dangerous
Some Capable Old Men
Calf Helps Salamander
A Taste of War

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

TOLLING BELLS all over Germany told the people that Von Hindenburg was dead. Newspapers told them that Hitler had stepped into the place of the old fighting general. In a few days Germany will go through the form of confirming Hitler's assumption of power.

This puts Hitler in the dangerous position of a man exercising absolute control, with no check upon his decisions. It takes a Mussolini, Kemal Pasha, or Stalin to hold that kind of job long. Hitler will now show whether he ranks with the "big three" in dictatorship. Power is dangerous to its possessor and those controlled by it.

The best description of the late old general and field marshal is supplied by Lloyd George in an article on Von Hindenburg issued by Universal Service the day before Hindenburg died.

Lloyd George recalled a conversation with Marshal Foch, head of the Allied forces, while the war was still raging.

Foch said of Ludendorff that he was un bon soldat. "A good soldier."

"Then," says Lloyd George, "I asked him, 'What about Von Hindenburg?' He replied, 'Un grand patriote,' a great patriot."

Hindenburg was a great patriot, devoted to his country. What he was in war, how important his courage in establishing the "Hindenburg line," is described in Lloyd George's article. The best brief description is, "A great patriot."

Lloyd George, referring to Nazis and Germany's "inchoate fanaticism," says of Hindenburg, "He cannot fairly be held responsible for events of the past years."

Older men, who in this country are often looked upon as "too old" at fifty and sixty, will be interested in this paragraph from Lloyd George's article: "When Paul Von Hindenburg was called upon to take chief command, he was in his seventieth year. His great French antagonist, Clemenceau, was close to his eightieth year. The octogenarian won."

Sixty-three years ago, in the war of 1870-1871, Von Hindenburg fought as a young officer, while Clemenceau was mayor of Mont Martre. He helped organize the defense of Paris, and Von Hindenburg, as a lieutenant in the Prussian Guards, rode through the Arch of Triumph, when Paris surrendered, passing over the spot where the unknown French soldier now lies buried.

Clemenceau, past eighty, with Lloyd George, past seventy, won the big war, and another old man, Von Hindenburg, past seventy, was the outstanding figure in the German defense.

When there is work to be done, the old still play a part of some consequence.

Dr. Barth at Columbia University has successfully used cephalin, "a clear fatty substance" from the brain of a calf, in "organizing" the nervous system of a salamander.

The salamander and calf are far apart. The salamander belongs in the carnivorous era; evolutionists say you have five fingers because the salamander had five toes. Mathematicians and musicians tell you it would have been better for you if the salamander had had six toes. Then you would have had six fingers, which would have given us the duo-decimal system in arithmetic, and a better hand for violin and guitar. The cephalin from the calf's brain is an extract which exists in all brains. What interests scientists is the fact that the salamander's ability to utilize the calf's cephalin in its nervous system proves that there is "a common basis for the nervous systems of creatures as far apart as cattle and salamanders."

All living things seem to be related; perhaps there is only one kind of "consciousness" or intelligence, its power depending on the mental instrument through which it expresses itself, just as there is only one kind of music, and harmony, depending for its excellence on the instrument provided.

Paderewski or Paganini could not play well on a piano or violin out of tune.

Somebody, perhaps "by mistake," inflicted a mysterious minor "gas attack" that prostrated 150 residents of Humahsien in Manchukuo. Japanese authorities suggest that Russian army men inadvertently "loosed the gas in chemical warfare maneuvres across the Amur river."

The 150 residents of Humahsien, suffering extreme inflammation of the lungs, with fever, nausea and unconsciousness, are not speculating. The rest of the world acquires, as it contemplates them, some idea as to what the next war will be like,

TROOPERS QUELL SHERBORN WOMEN

DISCONTENT OVER FOOD CAUSES REVOLT

State troopers were summoned to the Sherborn Reformatory for Women to quell a disturbance among 350 prisoners yesterday, it became known today.

An undercurrent of unrest and dissatisfaction over food served the inmates has resulted in hunger strikes, "yammering" and parades during the past week.

The disturbance followed, but is not believed to be connected with, the suicide of a 23-year-old inmate, Sarah May Towne of East Boston. This occurred two weeks ago but was revealed only today.

ORDER RESTORED

The situation became so menacing that at the request of Dr. Miriam Van Waters, superintendent of the reformatory, state troopers were sent to the institution to restore order. They left there last night after the disturbance had been brought under control.

Continued use of vegetables grown on the reformatory farm and the quantity served the prisoners resulted in the uprising, it was reported.

On Wednesday night when vegetable soup was served 50 women refused to eat it and began "yammering," banging their dishes on the table in the dining room and shouting.

INQUIRY LIKELY

After arousing the institution with their noise, the disturbers formed a parade and marched to the office of Dr. Van Waters, where spokeswomen protested against the food.

Yesterday, after this protest, conditions became even more threatening and the police were summoned.

It is understood that Arthur T. Lyman, new commissioner of correction, will visit the reformatory today to launch an investigation.

Masterpiece Found in Dirt

Buried in rubbish in the cellar of the Parlin Memorial Library in Everett, ERA workers engaged in the renovation of the building came across paintings, hardly discernable through the grim. One was a painting by David, celebrated French artist, and an expert offered $5000 for it. The offer was refused. The painting has been restored and today was hung in the library.

Roosevelt Ship Nears Portland

Longview, Wash., Aug. 3 (AP)—The U. S. cruiser Houston, with President Roosevelt aboard, passed under Longview bridge at 4:30 a. m., E. S. T., en route to Portland.

Bridge attendants said the big cruiser was "loafing along," apparantly taking no chances with Columbia river sand bars. The Houston was due at Portland at about 11 a. m.

Five Big Cruisers Leave Cape Cod

Provincetown, Aug. 3—Five heavy cruisers of the navy scouting fleet sailed at daybreak for other New England ports, the Northampton for Boston, the Chicago for Marblehead, the Salt Lake City for Portsmouth, N. H., the Portland for Portland, Me., and the flagship Indianapolis for Bar Harbor, Me.

Europe Alarmed at Dictatorship

MAYNARD JOB STARTS ELY, CURLEY ROW

A battle between the Curley and the Ely-Cole-Walsh forces to name a successor to Joseph A. Maynard as chairman of the Democratic State Committee was launched today immediately after it was learned auhoritatively that he would resign before September 1.

When Maynard steps out, Dr Helen I. Doherty McGillicuddy, of Boston, first vice-chairman of the state committee, will become temporary chairman until a permanent successor is chosen.

Maynard, it was learned, has made his decision to retire from his state political post and retain his place as United States Collector of the Port.

"LOYAL TO CHIEF"

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau set September 1 as the deadline for those holding high federal jobs and important party posts to quit one or the other.

Maynard yielded to the advice of many of his close friends, who told him that he had done his share "for the good of the party," financially and otherwise, for many years.

When he was asked about his decision, Maynard himself said:

"I am loyal to my chief. I will do whatever the department wants."

Friends now know definitely what his decision is.

Dr. McGillicuddy has been friendly for years with former Mayor Curley. She was with him in his successful fight against Mayor Mansfield. But it is claimed in political circles that there has been a slight coolness between them recently.

LABOR JOB CONSIDERED

It is known that Dr. McGillicuddy's name is being considered seriously by Governor Ely for the appointment as commissioner of labor and industries to succeed Edwin S. Smith, who resigned a few weeks ago to accept a federal position.

Governor Ely is anxious to make a major appointment for state service to a woman, it is known, before he retires from the governorship.

It is smart to be casual, to affect that certain picturesque carelessness in clothes. So at Wellesley the girls wear ear muffs and no hats in winter.

And at Radcliffe, which lays greater claim to scholastic brilliance than to sartorial splendor, it is considered correct to wear white sport shoes in winter.

These are just a few of the discoveries gleaned by Harper's Bazar in its attempt to learn the wardrobe requirements of a well-dressed co-ed through questionnoire.

27 SCHOOLS QUIZZED

Accordingly, questionnaires were sent to 271 of the best-dressed students by the magazine in its survey of 27 colleges throughout the nation.

And the survey not only uncovered the strange clothing worn by the girls in some institutions, but revealed that the girls have a language all their own that is expressively descriptive of the particular article of clothing to which it refers.

At the University of Oregon the girls term a long dress "a droop".

New Quake Jars Homes in Maine

Residents along the coast, from Massachusetts' North Shore to Casco Bay in Maine, jarred by the third series of earth shocks within 24 hours, were wondering today how many more were coming.

The latest earthquake knocked pictures from walls, rattled windows, frightened farm livestock and woke persons from their sleep. Seven distinct shocks, coming about 30 seconds apart, were noted just before midnight.

The earlier shocks were repeated in Marblehead and police were deluged with calls from cottagers aong the waterfront.

SCARED FROM SLEEP

Maine felt the worst of the 'quake. Persons living in Chebeague Island in Casco Bay, who were shaken from sleep, were loath to return to their beds.

They were mindful of the earlier experience of residents of Peaks Island who fled their cottages when they felt the foundations rock.

Vacationers at Old Orchard reported distinct shocks, with pictures shaken from the walls of houses and hotels. Ogunquit and Wells Beach made the same reports.

TOWNS FELT SHOCK

South Portland Long Island, Cape Elizabeth, Great Chebeague Island, Fort Williams, Falmouth Foreside, Thornton Heights and Pleasantdale all recorded the earthquake.

Harvard University authorities were surprised at the reports, since the seismograph is set in the geological labratories at Cambridge and no record was made by this sensitive instrument.

CHILDREN SAVED IN BLAZE

Fire of suspected incendiary origin, during which several children were rescued and one man risked his life to save another, swept from basement to roof of a four-story brick building in Florence street, South End, today, causing $5000 damage.

Asad Koram, 23, son of the owner occupying the third floor, climbed a waterspout from his window and swung to the fourth floor bedroom window of Angus McDougall after flames had cut off the stairway.

He climbed in and aroused McDougall and both fled via the spout and a fire escape. Louis Koram, owner, went down the fire escape. From the second floor, firemen led Mr. and Mrs. A Kinham and their four children to safety. The first floor was occupied by the United Syrian Club. Smoke forced several families from nearby homes.

JEWS SEE TERROR REIGN IN GERMANY

(Other Stories and Pictures on Pages 2, 4 and 5)

By International News Service

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 3—German Jews fear Chancellor Hitler's assumption of supreme power in Germany, means a revival of extreme anti-Semitism in the Reich, Berlin dispatches to the semi-official central radio news agency today.

Berlin, Aug. 3—All Germany, faced with an uncertain future of super-Hitlerism, was on edge today as it prepared to bury the late President Paul Von Hindenburg.

Outwardly, Germany was quietly mourning the loss of its war hero who laid aside his sword to serve as president of his country. Inwardly, Germany was fearful of things to come. And, as Germany feared, so feared all Europe.

With a dictatorial power without parallel, Hitler today is faced with complexities within the Fatherland and veritable boiling pots of trouble without. His first actions came with a suddenness and directness that left most of the country bewildered.

First, he combined the offices of chancellor and president. Then he announced that the office of president had died with Von Hindenburg and that he would be known only as "leader." Almost at the same time, he announced a "free plebiscite" for August 19 to "determine a successor for Von Hindenburg." But at the election, nobody will be allowed to speak against his candidacy and newspapers will not be allowed to make any comment.

Preparations for this election transcended in importance the

Army Cowed by Hitler's Crushing of June 30 Plot

Berlin, Aug. 3 (INS)—Why the German army accepted Hitler and let a one-time corporal appoint himself commander-in-chief was explained for the first time today by information hitherto unrevealed and possessing historical importance.

It makes clear what was not clear yesterday because, with all the reasons that could be adduced for the passivity of the Reichswehr on the death of Hindenburg and for their willingness to swear the oath of allegiance to Hitler, many persons were surprised that the army so easily gave up its last chance to obtain a commander-in-chief of its own choosing.

It is consequently also explained why Hitler was able to get all the power in his hands and thus usher in a new period of German history.

Finally it is information which would have added to the credibility of Hitler's account of the Roehm conspiracy but which had to be

Provincetown, Aug. 3—Four men and four women, adrift all night in a disabled motorboat awash in big waves, were rescued today by coast guards while being swept to sea eight miles off the tip of Cape Cod.

The rescued, all from Whitman, were Melbourne, Norman and Harold Beal; Mrs. Flora Mitchell and her daughter Gwendolyn; Phyllis Hattersley and Doris Hattersley, and Robert Pratt. Pratt's home is in Littlefield, Me., but he is summering in Whitman.

All suffered from exposure.

They set out last evening from Plymouth in Melbourne Beal's 20-foot cruiser, Argo, to visit the fleet at Provincetown. The Argo's motor became disabled before half the distance was covered. They drifted all night in a rough sea and through a storm.

TROOP PLOT TO MASSACRE HITLER'S ARMY STAFF REVEALED

TROOPS COWED; GIVE OATH TO DICTATOR

withheld from the German public for discretionary reasons.

Simply put, the information is this: That for 10 days before June 30, when Hitler put down the Storm Troops' revolt, the members of the General Staff of the army carried their service revolvers. Generals and colonels of the Prussian Army do not usually go armed.

For those 10 days, every man in the Reichswehr ministry had strapped to his side a heavy automatic with extra clips of cartridges.

STORM TROOPS PLOT

They carried guns because they had learned that the storm troopers planned to kill them in what would have been the most extraordinary massacre in modern political history—a massacre with a counterpart to be found no more recently than in the days of the Roman emperors, when the Praetorian guards sometimes surprised and slaughtered the general staff of legionnaires.

The central element in Roehm's plot was indeed to be a surprise attack on the Reichswehr ministry. Karl Ernst, group leader of 250,000 storm troops in Berlin had picked 20, shock troops to occupy the center of Berlin and the government quarters on the afternoon of June 30. Out of this 20,000 a selected number of the most reliable men were chosen as a murder squad.

ROEHM'S PLAN BARED

This squad, after the Reichswehr ministry had been surrounded, was to enter the building and then and there on the spot shoot down the general staff.

This was considered necessary because Roehm believed the rank and file of the army was friendly to the storm troops and to himself, that only the general staff was against him and that, if it could be removed, the army as a whole would go over to him.

The essential element in the planned action, however, was surprise. Now comes the first credible information of the flight of Ernst to Bremen where he was arrested on the morning of June 30.

Critics of the Hitler version of the conspiracy have objected that Ernst could not have been planning an attack in Berlin Saturday afternoon if he was in Bremen Saturday morning.

But now it has become known that Ernst had gotten wind of the fact that the general staff was apprised of the conspiracy.

ERNST DESERTS ROEHM

Roehm wanted to go ahead anyway on the assumption that Ernst with his numerically superior troops could fight his way into the Reichstag ministry even if the general staff got a few Reichswehr troops into town quickly enough to defend the building.

Ernst said nothing, but privately made up his mind to quit. He was quitting when he was arrested at Bremen with steamship tickets and 140,000 marks in his pocket.

Ernet's conduct has afforded critics of Hitler's conspiracy story their death point. It now seems adequately cleared up. The Prussian general staff officers do not go personally armed without a good reason.

Now it is easy to see why the army accepted Hitler yesterday. The army depends entirely on what its general staff decides. There never was any question of divisional commanders acting on their own. And the general staff yesterday was full of gratitude to Hitler.

GENERAL STAFF SCARED

Not merely because he had removed the storm troops as a competitor to the army. That was the impression yesterday. Today with this new light it becomes clear that the general staff was frightened. In all probability the insane plan of Ernst and Roehm could never have succeeded and the Reichswehr would have swept Enrst's assassins to death under a hurricane of machine gun fire.

But there it was. After all, no pleasant prospect. And no matter how the attack on the Reichswehr ministry came out it would have meant civil war between the army and the storm troops all over Germany with tens of thousands dead.

So the army took the oath yesterday. Your correspondent saw some of the men do it in the barracks of the Berlin guard in Rathenowerstrasse. It was an impressive ceremony with a regiment drawn up in a hollow square and General Von Witzleben barking out, two words at a time, the formula that meant from now on every man in the German army is sworn personally to obey Hitler and defend his oath with his life.

"I swear," shouted the general.

"I swear," came back the echo from 1500 men.

They stood with hands upraised and two fingers high in the gesture used in court.

"I swear by God this holy oath."

Austrian Bishops Oppose Papen as Hitler Envoy

Vienna, Aug. 3 (INS)—Chancellor Schuschnigg made no move today for approval or rejection of Vice-Chancellor Von Papen of Germany as Minister to Vienna, though Reichsleader Hitler has agreed Von Papen shall be a regularly accredited envoy and not his special emissary.

The government's newspaper Reichpost admitted today the Catholic Bishops of Austria took steps to prevent the government from accepting Von Papen. The paper says:

"The Vatican has not intervened in the internal affairs of Austria but sympathizes with the action of the Austrian Bishops because Von Papen disappointed the church in connection with the German concordat. The Vatican previously rejected Hitler's proposal to appoint Von Papen Ambassador to the Vatican."

(Editor's note—Von Papen negotiated the concordat between the Reich and the Vatican but afterward it was charged at Vatican City that the German government had violated its terms by persecution of Catholic leaders.)

The Reichspost, the only paper not fearing the censorship, discussed the death of President Von Hindenburg of Germany quite frankly today, saying:

"In spite of the good will he created, two great catastrophies are connected with Von Hindenburg's name, one military and one political. Hindenburg, as head of the German army, lost the war, and in peace-time he was responsible for the catastrophic national Socialist (Nazi) experiment."

EIGHT KILLED IN NOVA SCOTIA

By International News Service

Halifax, Aug. 3.—Several sections of this province were in mourning today after a series of accidents took a toll of eight lives.

BRITISH NAVAL SECRETS LOST

The disappearance of the documents was discovered when a train arrived here from London. The news caused a sensation throughout the entire nation.

"It is understood," the Evening Standard stated, "that the documents are of supreme importance to a foreign power."

The papers concerned, it was reported, tests that have been made of new naval vessels and guns. Details of these tests have been closely guarded by the admiralty.

Scotland Yard and a hrde of secret service agents were assigned to the case.

She was greatly surprised, not at Marie's remembering her, because there was a close bond of affection between the sisters, but because Marie was able to view her with such great generosity and leave so much.

BRICKS FLY AS STOCKYARDS RE-OPEN

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 3—Accompanied by a shower of brickbats from strike pickets the giant Union Stock Yards reopened today and 4000 head of cattle were received.

Strike breakers went on duty and handled the feeding, watering and weighing of cattle, hoks and sheep, while several hundred police stood by in an attempt to prevent violence.

irst violence came shortly after dawn when a farmer, bringing his cattle to market in a truck, was showered with brickbats by strike pickets. Police quickly dispersed the pickets. The farmer was unhurt.

Both strikers and employers were to meet today with General Hugh S. Johnson, NRA chieftain, to attempt a settlement of the strike.

So far all peace negotiations have broken down over the flat demand of the strikers that the company must gaurantee a minimum wage of 20 a week to the livestock handlers.

Sworn to secrecy, according to the specialist, He examined Mrs. Roosevelt on July 17 and operated July 21. He said:

"She took it like a girl scout—without a whimper. Although painful the operation was not serious."

FEAR FOX RABIES SPREAD HERE

Massachusetts health authorities today were alarmed at the prospect of the spread of a possible radies epidemic among foxes from Maine to this state.

They are carefully watching the moves of Maine officials, who today sent orders to trappers in Franklin and Somerset counties to use "drastic measures" to exterminate all foxes.

The animals have become so crazed by rabies that children, cows and dogs have been attacked. The order to use even poison gas on the animals was sent out by the Maine fish and game division, after Dr. George H. Coombs, head of the health bureau, obtained positive proof that foxes in the region, which covers several hundred square miles, were generally suffering from the disease.

A United States biological survey field man, sent into Maine to study the situation, reported that "unless drastic measures are introduced, there is a possibility for rapid spread of rabies among the wild animals of the state."

As a result of his recommendation that there should be "exhaustive trapping" and the gassing of all burrows with poison, Maine officials sent trappers over a three hundred mile area to exterminate all foxes and later probably all other ground animals except deer.

GREEK SUSPECT IS WATCHED IN HERMIT DEATH

Fitchburg, Aug. 3—Suspicion today centered on a definite person, a resident of the Greek-American colony here, as the search for the slayer of 64-year-old James Gamvas entered its fourth day.

This was learned from police, who were, however, unwilling to make further revelations until they had enough evidence against the suspect to guarantee immediate arrest.

Meanwhile, Chief of Police Godley said that his inspectors were still working on two theories first advanced as motives for the murder of the wealthy recluse.

VENDETTA CHECKED

One was the "vengence" theory, which had it that a vendetta, beginning when Gamvas divorced his wife, ended in the man's death. The wife, Martha, lives in Albania, and when she refused to join Gamvas in this country he divorced her secretly, for desertion.

The other theory was that a swindle ring was responsible, in part, for the murder. A woman, said by witnesses to have visited Gamvas frequently, is sought.

For all of these theories, however, or perhops in confirmation of either, certain facts have been established that point to one man here as having been incriminated in the killing.

RINGS WERE GIFTS

Police wouldn't say they expected an arrest right away, but they gave indication that such action was expected.

An opal ring and another trinket, found among Gamvas' effects, at first connected with the "swindle-woman," were believed today to have been purchased by the dead man as gifts for his two nieces, daughters of Xenophon Gamvas, a brother at whose home the murder victim lived.

'GEN.' HUEY LONG'S GUARDS OUSTED BY COURT'S ORDER

SENATOR AND ALLY ALLEN BOTH MUTE

By International News Service

New Orleans, Aug. 3—Senator Huey P. Long's armed guardsmen were ordered from the City Registrar's office today, by authority of a civil order, signed by the judge of a district court.

Long and his ally, Governor O. K. Allen, have not indicated whether they would abide by the decree, but Judge Nat Bond, who issued it has the backing of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley and a police force of 1500.

The order is really a temporary injunction, forbidding the soldiers of the "Kingfish" to continue their guard around the office. Troop commanders, and the Senator himself, were ordered to appear in court Tuesday and show why the order should not be made permanent.

CHIEF SERVES ORDER

George Reyer, superintendent of New Orleans police, personally served Judge Bond's order on the "Kingfish." They conferred in the Senator's hotel room for more than half an hour. Then Reyer emerged.

"It took him a long time to read the order," he declared. "Then we talked about the Legislature and national affairs."

Reyer acted in the capacity of deputy sheriff and was accompanied by two other deputies. A pair of officers who attempted to serve the injunction writ on Adjutant-General Fleming, commanding state troops at the Jackson Barracks, were denied admission to the officer, and guardsmen with bayonets blocked their entrance.

The fight centers around the efforts of Long and Allen to control the registrar's office, where voters are being registered for the Congressional primary. Both the Long forces and the "old regulars," headed by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, have candidates.

FIGHT TO RUN CITY

The fight goes beyond this race, however, and has really become a battle to determine who will run the city government of New Orleans.

Anixety hung over the city today, and townspeople were demanding that peace be declared by the warring factions. Business men said the activities of the port were being disrupted, and that European shippers were becoming alarmed over rumors that "civil war," was being carried on here.

Troubles of the city administration were increased when a group of destitute visited the relief office and begged for food. Their names had been taken from relief rolls when the state Legislature failed to provide funds for them last month.

Various possibilities loomed today as the result of Judge Bond's order. It was not known whether Allen and Long would disband their troops, declare the entire city under martial law, or submit to jail senteces for contempt.

PARTIAL MARTIAL LAW

A state of "partial martial law" has been in effect until now. This affected the registrar's office and various "vice districts" of the city, where state troopers were investigating alleged graft on the orders of the Governor.

Political waters were troubled in still another quarter. State tax assessors, appointed by the Long faction, began to make a new set of assessments for city property today. Governor Allen announced that their findings would supersede the assessments of the regular City Tax Board.

Names of the city board were stricken from the state payrolls, and Governor Allen ordered Mayor Walmsley and Sheriff Maurice Hartson to stop advertising property for sale for non-payment of taxes.

General Huey Long's Tactics

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

General Huey Long is picking up the battle of New Orleans where Andy Jackson left off.

He is opposed by General Walmsley, who is mayor of New Orleans when General Long ain't around.

Walmsley has 1600 police in back of him, while General Long depends on the militia, which has never lost a postponed battle yet.

Like the trouble in Vienna, the contest will be for the radio station. The winner will broadcast until he gets a commercial sponsor.

General Long has infantry, cavalry and artillery and is doing some propaganda among the Boy Scouts.

Customers Snap Up First Whiskey at $1 a Quart

By Universal Service

Washington, Aug. 3—For the first time since repeal, straight whiskey sold for $1 a quart to the consumer here.

It was new low price, harking back to pre-prohibition prices in the face of higher federal and local taxes. Consumers snapped up the offer.

Announcement of $1-a-quart whiskey brought a deluge of inquiries to the seller from other liquor establishments. How can you do it? was the query.

Ferdinand M. Ney, owner of the $1 whiskey distributing firm, explained that one factor in permitting him to sell at that price was the fact that his product was 80 proof, whereas straight whiskey generally sold is 100 proof.

The federal tax is $2 a gallon. Ney said his liquor was distilled last spring. Ney gave the cost per quart of his liquor in cents as follows:

Federal tax, 45½; District of Columbia tax, 12½, strip or neck tax, 1; freight from Chicago where it is bottled, 5; bottle, label and carton, 12½, making a total of 76½ cents.

That does not include overhead for wholesaler or retailer, Ney explained.

FORMER WIFE SUES BANCROFT

By Associated Press

Los Angeles, Aug. 3—Mrs. Octavia Broske Bancroft, former opera singer and wife of George Bancroft film actor, was named corespondent today in a separate maintenance action filed against the movie star by Mrs. Edna G. Prothers Bancroft, new Orleans actress.

The actress amended the original complaint in which she charged that Bancroft failed to divorce her before marrying a second time. She charged that Bancroft deserted her in 1917.

Bancroft denied the charges, said he was divorced in New York and charged that insane jealousy on the part of his first wife broke up their marriage.

PROBE OF PHONE INDUSTRY OFF

Unless the state department of public utilities or Wycliffe C. Marshall present a specific complaint that there has been violation of the law, Attorney General Joseph E. Warner will take no action regarding the corporate organization and operation of the telephone industry in this state.

The action was suggested by Mr. Marshall after the Public Utilities Commission failed to order any reduction in the telephone rates in Massachusetts. Mr. Marshall, in his letter, said the public utilities department had suggested that he bring the matter to the phone organization to the attention of the attorney general.

Mr. Warner, in a letter to Chairman Henry C. Atwill of the utilities department, asked him and his department to furnish a definite statement regarding the alleged interlocking of telephone corporations. He reminded Mr. Atwill of the general responsibility which rests on the utilities department with reference to violations of law tthrough the organization of utilities.

TEX RICKARD'S CHILD WINS

New York Aug. 3.—Five and one-half years after her father's death Maxine Texas Rickard, 13, daughter of George L. "Tex" Rickard, famous sports promoter, has finally won a share in his estate.

Surrogate Foley ended a long controversy by directing that $21,537, left in trust for Rickard's mother-in-law, who died in 1931, be used as the principal of a trust fund for the 13-year-old child.

She will receive the income from this until she marries or until she is 25, when she is to get one-quarter of the principal. She will receive a second quarter at 35. The balance is to remain in trust until her death and then go to her children.

Under Rickard's will, the child was to receive the residuary estate. But the estate was less than $100,000, and no residue existed after the payment of other legacies, which had to be reduced.

When the mother-in-law, Mrs. Flora Haig, died, Rickard's mother Mrs. Lou J. Adams, of Seattle, and his grandniece, Edith May Schultz, of New York, contended their reductions should be made up, but the court ruled against them.

COOLIDGE RITES OPEN G. O. P. CAMPAIGN

By International News Service

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 3 — From barefoot boy to president—to the grave—the green hills of Vermont looked silently on for more than half a century, and today, they echoed the eulogy of their son, Calvin Coolidge on the 11th anniversary of his induction to the highest office in the nation.

On the side of one of the four peaks of the Green Mountains which surround his birthplace, a group of his former townspeople, admirers and associates in office, together with his widow, Mrs. Grace Coolidge, gathered at his shrine to pay homage to the late chief executive.

BECK SOUNDS KEYNOTE

The assemblage, according to its sponsors, was a rededication of the Republican party to the principles for which Calvin Coolidge stood and upon which he lived and acted.

The "Keynoter," was Representative James M. Beck, of Pennsylvania, but there were many others attending, including Senator Warren R. Austin, of Vermont; Senator Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware; Representative Bertrand H. Snell, House minority leader; Representative Charles A. Plumley and John G. Sargent, Coolidge's close friend and former United States Attorney-General under him.

NEW DEAL SCORED

Calvin Coolidge versus the "new deal" was the theme of Representative Beck's address.

Beck decried the present administration and the federal bureaucracy built up around it, and likened the "blue eagle" to the "Soviet buzzard." He asserted:

"The present regimentation of American trade and industry, whether of farm or of the factory, and whether under the NRA or the AAA, may possibly be justified by the emergency of an acute depression. I do not concede it—but no one who knows our history can justly claim that it is American in spirit.

"The greatest evil of the present hour is that this policy of regimenting trade and industry under an economic dictatorship, if unhappily it should become permanent, would devalue the character of the average American.

"The constitution never intended to vest all power over trade and industry in the federal government.

DICTATORSHIP CHARGED

"I appreciate that the dictatorial powers of the NRA and the AAA have been exercised by an iron hand veiled i na velvet glove

"A pretended spirit of moderation has been one concession to the American spirit, but dictatorial powers are not less dictatorial because they may be politely and apologetically exercised.

"Eternal vigilance still remains the price of liberty."

Sea Raider's Colors Found

Pittsfield, Aug. 3—The imperial colors of the German raider, Emden, believed lost when the German fleet was scuttled at Scapa Flow in 1919, have been discovered in Austerliz, N. Y.

According to Paul B. Eggert, present owner of the flag, the flag was given to him by the brother-in-law of a United States naval officer, present at the surrender of the German war-dogs.

Eggert has written a German naval attache in Washington telling him that the flag is once again in German hands. It is believed that he may offer to return it to Admiral Ludwig von Reutter, former commander of the Emden.

Girl Mother Scrapes Poison From Jail Floor to Die

Betrayed at 17, Sarah Towne Ends Her Life Brooding Over Child

In the cold earth of the prison cemetery at Sherborn Reformatory for Women today lay the body of Sarah May Towne of East Boston, who was betrayed by a youth when she was 17, and died by her own hand when she was 23 for love of her fatherless baby.

Her story, as grim as any tragedy ever written, was revealed by the report of Medical Examiner Michael J. Shaugnessy of Framingham, and a fortnight-old notation on the East Boston police blotter:

"Notify Jennie Towne that Sarah May Towne passed away."

Sarah May Towne really "passed away" on July 20, but Sherborn Reformatory officials ordered the matter hushed up and to any inquiries, responded that they knew nothing of the case.

SWALLOWED POISON

According to information the 22-year old girl ended her life by scraping pest exterminator from the floor of the prison lavatory and swallowed it.

Then, it was reported, she walked into the office of Dr. Miriam van Waters, the head of the institution, gasped a few faint words and died.

Her dying plea was that the baby which she had cherished after its birth be saved from commitment to a foundling home.

AN ORPHAN AT 8

Behind this tragic tale was the background of an eight-year-old girl who was left fatherless and motherless in East Boston and taken to another home as an adopted child.

SARAH MAY TOWNE

She was unhappy there and hard to manage. When only 13, Sarah May Towne entered her first institution, that at Lancaster, where she spent two years of correction as a "stubborn child."

When her time was up, the girl, still a child, went to work in a factory.

SHE FELL IN LOVE

There she met a youth a little older than she. They fell in love—or Sarah did. They planned to be married, but the youth, whose name she never told, wanted to go to Florida on a honeymoon.

He had no money, Sarah said, but he knew how to get some and that way was the wrong way. Sarah accompanied him as he broke into a house. The pair were trapped by police.

Again the girl went to an institution, this time to Sherborn Reformatory for Women. During her 15-month term she was described as a model prisoner.

She was released but her heart was broken and she was through with the youth who had talked to her of marriage.

LIFE BECAME HARDER

It was a hard path Sarah May Towne was treading. A baby was born to her. Discharged from the hospital, she found things getting more and more difficult.

She recalled the way her first love was going to get money, but she didn't want money, or a trip to Florida this time. She wanted clothes for her baby. When she couldn't get a decent job because of her institution record, she decided she would steal.

She did. Again she was trapped, and again she went back to Sherborn. And again she was a model prisoner—until she heard that her baby was to be taken from her care forever.

BROODED OVER BABY

It was said that the child was under care of relatives in East Boston and Dorchester and the relatives had been put on welfare. According to information the girl received, the baby was to go to a foundling home and she might never see it again.

She brooded for days. Then one day she noticed the stuff they spread on the lavatory floor was labelled "poison."

This was the last chapter of the life of Sarah May Towne.

THIRD AUSTRIAN NAZI ORDERED TO GALLOWS

By ALFRED TYRNAUER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Vienna, Aug. 3 (INS)—Edmund Hoenisch, 21-year-old Vienna Nazi leader, was convicted of high treason this afternoon and sentenced to be hanged at 8:30 tonight.

Hoenisch was the fourth person to face a court-martial since the July 25 putsch in which Chancellor Dollfuss was assassinated.

Two Nazis, Otto Planetta and Franz Holzweber, were hanged early this week and Paul Hudl, on whose behalf the Archduke Eugen intervened, was sentenced to life imprisonment.

Hoenisch, sentenced today, was charged merely with possession of explosives. He and his young wife collapsed when the extreme penalty was imposed. He is the second man sentenced to death under the anti-terrorist decree the late Chancellor Dollfuss promulgated as one of his last acts. Hoenisch, however, is the first ordered to death for mere possession of explosives.

CO-ED CLOTHES ARE UNUSUAL

At Vassar "susan" means a girdle.

GIRDLE IS "SQUEEZER"

At Purdue, on the other hand, a girdle is a "squeezer".

At Smith, socks are "footsies".

At Iowa State, soft crushable hats are "jam-ons."

NONCHALANT

In colleges where men are a minus quantity, the girls are much more nonchalant in their apparel. They affect utter carelessness, appearing in tweed skirts and sweaters, usually buttoned on backwards, and with the sleeves rolled up to the elbow.

Socks, flat-heeled shoes and no hats complete this classic campus uniform.

But in institutions where football heroes strut their stuff, the girls primp and keep themselves up to the latest word of style.

Well-tailored woolen dresses and higher heels are much more in evidence.

PEARLS AND SWEATERS

At Smith the girls, if they like, wear a string of pearls with their sweaters.

At Wells, Aurora, New York, they wear sail pants and slacks to classes, with knitted baby bonnets. Cute?

Syracuse girls go to classes in ski suits.

Hindenburg's Body to Lie in State Eight Days

By TOM WILHELM
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Neudeck, Germany, Aug. 3—The Hohenzollerns paid their respects today to the man who led their armies in the World War and, in 1918, advised the head of the dynasty to abdicate the German throne.

The Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm, impressively arrayed in the uniform of the First Danzig Lifeguards, the famous Black Hussars of Death-Head fame, arrived at the modest home of President Paul Von Hindenburg to pay homage to the dead warrior.

He came as the representative of Wilhelm II, the Kaiser who made Von Hindenburg the leader of the German armed forces, and the Hohenzollern family.

HIGH, LOW, PAY HOMAGE

The scion of the House of Hohenzollern was the foremost of a lengthening list of Germans of high and low degree who came to Neudeck today to honor the national idol. Some were admitted to the manor house; some were not.

As the nation mourned, it was learned that both the desire of the state for a formal funeral and the desire of the field marshal for a simple burial will be fulfilled.

TO LIE IN STATE

The body of President Von Hindenburg will lie in state for eight days in the national monument at Tannenberg, which commemorates his most famous victory.

Then it will be brought back to Neudeck and laid beside that of his parents and 31 other Von Hindenburgs who sleep in the family plot on the Neudeck estate.

Monday night the body of Von Hindenburg will be placed on a gun-carriage and slowly conveyed from the courtyard of the estate to a point two miles from Neudeck. There it will be transferred to a motor hearse.

For more than forty miles thereafter the hearse will move through the night along a road dimly lit by flares from torches held by troopers of the Schutz Staffel, Reichsleader Hitler's personal "black shirt" bodyguard, and the Sturm Abelung, the "brown shirt" army of the Nazis.

RETURN TO BATTLEFIELD

Two miles from Tannenberg it will again be placed aboard a gun-carriage and, as befits a soldier, the old wrrior will pass again to the battlefield where his greatest glory came to him.

On Tuesday the nation will pay its tribute. A huge memorial service will be held in the court of the monument, which resembles a huge fortress. It will be at this service that the foreign governments will be represented.

After eight days the body will be carried back to the modest estate here, where the soldier-president loved to live as a country gentleman, with his dogs, his children and grandchildren and his neighbors around him.

His body will lie where he wished it to, in the only remaining empty plot in the family cemetery atop a little knoll.

EUROPE IN FEAR OF HITLER

preparations for a state funeral for Von Hindenburg, lying in state in his Neudeck home, a funeral ceremony so impressively grand that the nation will be more than satisfied that the National Socialists were not remiss in honoring its hero.

The campaign for this election will begin Monday when Hitler will address the all-Nazi Reichstag and the whole nation over the radio paying his tribute to the dead war hero and pledging himself to use his new powers and new responsibilities in creating a glorious future for the Reich.

"Steeped in the conviction that all authority of the state must proceed from the people," as he said in his letter to Minister of the Interior Wilhelm Frick, asking him to arrange the election, "Der Fuehrer" seeks to show the world that he rules a nation of amenable Hitlerites."

That there will be no opposition candidates, goes without saying. Even before the shootings of the Hitler oppositionists on June 30, there was no one in Germany who dared openly oppose Hitler. There is no thought of democracy in Hitler's idea that authority must proceed from the people. His idea is the authoritative state with all the people lined up behind the leader accepting his decision, not only without opposition but without question.

This coming election will be another of Hitler's contributions to the history of government and the science of political economy. Again he will show the professors who teach that dreary subject in colleges all over the world that the rules of government which they thought to be subject only to the changes of organic evolution can under modern conditions be changed overnight.

WORKS ON PROPAGANDA

His method is mobilization of public opinion by absolute control and energetic use of all media of propaganda. Mussolini utilized this method to some extent, the Soviets did it within the limits of their largely illiterate and impolitical population, but Hitler in educated Germany has gone them all ten miles better.

Hitler claims that in the election of all Nazi Reichstag (the Nazi candidates had no opponents in their election districts) that almost 40,000,000 persons delegated to National Socialism the authority of the state which "must proceed from the people."

Nazi, as a whole, are jubilant over the turn of events. They see in Hitler's declination of the title of president a master stroke to retain public support.

The pledge of allegiance to Hitler by the army and navy also was hailed as a big step forward by the Nazis. The oath, taken by all soldiers and sailors, pledges the fighting men of Germany to lay down their lives for Hitler. Never in the history of the country were the soldiers and sailors required to make such a "to the death" oath.

And, even while Hitler was preparing his funeral oration for Von Hindenburg, reports filtered to Berlin that Czechoslovakian troops were concentrating on their frontier, fearful of a movement into their country by Nazi troops. Austria, where Nazi rebels are threatening to bomb a church and kill a priest for each Nazi executed in the Dollfuss assassination, literally is holding its breath.

GERMANS MASSING, REPORT

Reports that lack confirmation due to a rigid censorship say German troops are gathered on the Austrian border.

It is known that Hitler's aim has been to take Austria under the German banner. Von Hindenburg, alone, it is said, kept him from acting. Now that the famous war lord is gone, speculation is rife on what the former lance corporal and Austrian house painter might do.

Europe also is apprehensive over Hitler's selection of a vice chancellor, now that Franz Von Papen is removed from that post by being named special envoy to Austria. From present indications, it is pointed out, Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia who is called the "most Nazi of them all" is first in the running.

NAZIS FOR GOERING

Others named in inner circles are General Werner von Blomberg, minister of defense, and the experienced diplomat, Konstantin Von Neurath, now foreign minister.

At Nazi headquarters, there was strong feeling that a "dyed-in-the-wool" Nazi should get the important post on which, to a large extent, hinges the fate of Germany and Europe. For this reason, Goering is seen as Hitler's choice.

But over all this turmoil and intrigus, there was a deep and real national mourning for the dead president. National feeling was so intense that Von Hindenburg's own wishes for a quiet, private funeral and interment at his Neudeck estate beside his mother and father have been over-ridden and the low and mighty will pay their tribute to him at impressive services at Tannenberg where Hindenburg turned back the Russian troops.

HITLER'S BLACK SHIRTS SWORN

By Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 3—Riechs Chancellor Hitler's 200,000 black-shirted guards—the Schutz Staffel—have, like the army and navy, taken an oath pledging fealty to Hitler.

The oath-taking was conducted in secrecy yesterday. Former President Von Hindenburg's death had scarcely been announced when the Schutz Staffel was summoned.

Residents of the fashionable West End district, who stumbled upon the ceremony, were told:

"Mind your own business, this is a private matter."

The taking of the oath was done on the back lawn of a villa until recently occupied by a Jew.

13 MILLION NOW IN FILM DRIVE

By Associated Press

New York, Aug. 3—Reports received in New York today estimated that more than 13,000,000 Catholics have enrolled in the Legion of Decency's national campaign against objectionable motion pictures.

Dispatches from Washington to the Catholic News, weekly of the archdiocese, said the drive had been organized in two-thirds of the 105 dioceses of the country.

The National Catholic Welfare Council expects that more than 20,000,000 parishioners will be aligned with the campaign by the middle of October.

The Interfaith Committee of Catholics, Protestants and Jews, recently organized here to aid the drive, is scheduled to meet next Tuesday.

The pledge commits signers to refrain from attending theaters exhibiting films against which complaints have been lodged.

Malady Victims Walking

By Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 3 — Two Chicago children, victims of a rare nervous disorder which has robbed them of muscular co-ordination, are learning how to walk.

From birth, the two, Marian Marchese, 12, and her brother, Samuel, 10, have lacked control over their arms and legs. Their speech, also, has been affected.

Physicians describe the afflicton as Ataxia, the only cases of their kind ever in Chicago, and they know of no cure.

However, the two have recently developed a slight measure of control in walking, and Samuel is able with difficulty to ride a bicycle.

HINDENBURG SCOFFED AT U.S. WAR

By KARL VON WIEGAND

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service Inc

Berlin, Aug. 3—By a singular historic and geographical co-incidence Field Marshal President Paul Von Hindenburg died on the 20th anniversary of Germany's declaration of war against Russia, not for from the battlefield of Tannenberg, where, by his sensational victory over the Russian Generals Samsonoff and Rennenkampg, in August, 1914, he became one of the immortal generals in the history of the world's greatest battles.

The man whom the Kaiser dismissed from the army because he was no courtier or flatterer and recalled from retirement to roll back the Czar's vast army and save East Prussia, became the hope of the German nation in the long war and in the postwar period grew into "The German Oak," a symbol of German stability during years of stress and storm.

CALLED RUSSIA "TOO BIG"

"I am not a Napoleon."

This was his remark to me when on December 4, 1914, I sat next to him at dinner in his headquarters on the Eastern Front. It was my first meeting with him. His remark was in answer to my question whether he intended to push on to Moscow. He added:

"I am convinced I could get to Moscow, perhaps farther, but I am not going to repeat what Napoleon tried and failed in. Russia is so big it would swallow the biggest army. Russia has no heart at which you can strike."

On the back of a dinner menu card he drew for me a rough sketch of the battle of Tannenberg and explained how he defeated a numerically vastly superior Russian army.

DENIES MASS DROWNINGS

The world press was filled with sensational reports that he had driven the Russians into the Masurian swamps, that thousands had died, and that German officers had gone insane from not being able to forget the shrieks and cries of drowning Russians. Von Hindenburg smiled as I asked him about that. He said:

"If there were many drowned, perhaps it was 150, but I am afraid that is an exaggeration."

On December 3, 1915, I was again Von Hindenburg's guest at dinner. Again it was at his headquarters in the east, at the castle of the Prince of Pless. It was on the eve of the decision whether or not Germany should resume ruthless submarine war. Von Hindenburg was for it.

Sitting between him and General Ludendorff, the entire staff silently around us, I tried to convince the field marshal that resumption of ruthless U-boat warfare would drag America into the war.

"U. S. WILL GET YOU"

Von Hindenburg believed the German submarines would prevent American troop transports from landing in large numbers in France. We both had warmed to our arguments. Vividly I remember retorting:

"Field Marshal, your intelligence service obviously is not good, for you do not seem to know the energetic spirit and determination of our youthful America. If, as you say you can, you stop our transports, we will build a bridge across the Bering sea if need be to get you, but get you we will, even if we have to come through Siberia."

The staff thought this a good joke. They burst out laughing. Ludendorff, who sat on my right, had little to say. He asked a question now and then. Von Hindenburg and myself were doing the talking. The field marshal said:

"Even if a resumption of submarine warfare brings America into the war, you cannot get into fighting effectively before the war will have been decided and perhaps it is not a bad idea to have America at the peace table."

With some impatience he continued:

"You canont stamp an army out of the ground. We certainly ought to know something about that."

LIKED DETECTIVE STORIES

We talked and argued until 11:20 p. m. Von Hindenburg suddenly broke off with the remark:

"It will soon be midnight. I have some work to do yet and then I read light detective stories in bed until the wheels in my head run down a little."

He explained he often read in bed until his mind quieted down after a day of intensive work. Usually he read German comics in numerous newspapers and such "simplicissimus kladderfdatsch," but often he read detective novels.

My next talk with Von Hindenburg was in June, 1919. He invited me to his villa in Hanover. The war had just ended and he was living in retirement. He remarked, after the greetings were over, and we sat down together with Frau Von Hindenburg, who was still living:

"You were right after all."

DEPLORED U. S. SACRIFICE

Discussing the war, he laid more stress on the moral effect of America's entry and the influence of Woodrow Wilson's promises to the German people than upon the number of what he called "untrained American troops" on the fighting line, whose bravery he extolled but whose "ruthless sacrifice through lack of training" he deplored.

Upon that occasion he made to me his famous remark:

"The Kaiser is my Kaiser and will remain my Kaiser."

Death Fails to Bridge Ludendorff Breach

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.)

Berlin, Aug. 3—Even death could not bridge the gulf between Paul Von Hindenburg and his "war buddy" and closest co-worker, General Eric Von Ludendorff, who shares with the dead field marshal the laurels and the glory of the victory at Tannenberg and the famous "Ludendorff offensive" of 1917-18 on the Western front.

Von Ludendorff received his first news of Von Hindenburg's death from me when I called him on the telephone at his home in South Germany. He said:

"That is the first I have heard of the field marshal's death." He declined to comment, adding:

"You can understand."

Von Hindenburg

Von Luendorff

Von Ludendorff will not attend the funeral. Among other differences and bitterness after Von Hindenburg became president, Von Ludendorff has never forgotten nor ever forgiven the fact that when the great battle memorial was unveiled at Tannenberg, he was not invited, nor mentioned.

It was expected that Field Marshal Von Mackensen would head the funeral delegation of officers from the old imperial general staff. Von Mackensen is himself 84. Von Hindenburg was his chief for the last two years of the war.

General Alexander Von Kluck, of Marne battle fame, who with his 88 years is the oldest living German general of the World War, was deeply moved at news of Von Hindenburg's death. He said:

"What are words to describe the feeling of loss at the departure of a dear and beloved comrade in arms."

FAIRBANKS TO SEEK PEACE

By International News Service.

Paris, Aug. 3—Douglas Fairbanks is arranging to fly to China within a week, hoping Oriental skies will enable him to forget his marital troubles and the divorce suit filed in London by Lord Ashley in which he was named co-respondent.

This was learned by International News Service today after London had confirmed the fact that trial of Lord Ashley's suit had been definitely put over to the October court term.

According to Fairbanks' friends here he is now at Cannes, on the French Riviera, having slipped out of England unnoticed after completing work on his last film. He was accompanied by Alexander Korda.

Fairbanks originally intended to go to Hollywood before making his trip to China, but it is now understood he altered his plans and decided to go immediately, making practically all of the journey by air. He is delaying his departure a few days in order to meet a group of friends from Hollywood, headed by Darryl Zanuck, who are converging on Cannes today.

Others in the group include Michael Curtiz, film director; Bess Meredith, the writer, and Harry Wardell, movie technician. Joseph Schenck is already at Cannes.

The film parley will discuss Fairbanks' plans and the censorship drive in America.

Ely Pays Tribute to Von Hindenburg

In a statement on the death of General Von Hindenburg, Governor Ely said:

"The death of the great military leader leaves the German situation most uncertain. He was a great soldier, but in spite of his military training he was a very democratic man. It was because of this combination of characteristics that he was a real stabilizer of the conflicting emotions in Germany."

RUCCI IN NEW ERA DEMAND

Toni B. Rucci, former Malden building contractor, who has won every point he has brought to obtain ERA work over the head of the Malden administrator, and who was assigned to work three days a week at the Waite's Mount project in Malden by the state's administrator's office, has brought yet another demand.

He applied to Dr. Joseph W. Proctor, Malden administrator, demanding four days per week work instead of three. Dr. Proctor promptly refused the demand, as he had previously refused former demands.

Rucci declared he would see State Administrator Carney.

Rain-Making Plane to Fire 600 Bombs

Waxahachie, Tex., Aug. 3—Two ex-service men, recalling the seeming effect of war-time cannonading on weather conditions, will go aloft today in an attempt to produce rain, providing there are sufficient clouds.

Their equipment will be 600 bombs from 12 to 21 inches in diameter, and an eight-passenger plane.

James A. Doze, an electrical engineer and director of the experiment, said the time of the takeoff would depend largely upon whether the weather was cloudy. Wilfred Bottenfield will pilot the ship and a mechanic and assistant will accompany them.

They planned to make five trips to an altitude of about 12,000 feet, exploding 120 bombs each trip by means of time fuses.

if Japan and Russia, or others, decide to start it.

Thanks to private initiative, flying progresses in the United States. A giant Sikorsky plane, built to carry 24 passengers, powered with four engines, has smashed all records for transport plane flight, covering a course of 1242 miles in 7 hours 53 minutes while using only 69 percent of its 3000 horsepower.

The plane, built to travel between the United States and South American countries, could go back and forth over the Atlantic easily, with one stop at the Azores.

Also the first "over-night plane" from the Atlantic coast to the Pacific coast has begun its regular flights, carrying two pilots and twelve passengers. It leaves the Atlantic ocean in the evening, lands on the edge of the Pacific next morning.

Mr. Morgenthau, Secretary of the Treasury, announces $50-000,000 in silver certificates to be issued as soon as possible. Back of them will be "free silver" in the Treasury. The Treasury has 62,000,000 ounces of silver, for which it paid something more than $47,000,000. It is handed out in paper, on a basis of $1.29 per ounce. Good, profit. Now, the problem for the average citizen is how to transfer some of those fifty million silver certificates to his own pocketbook.

HAND-ME-DOWN CIVILIZATION IS NEW AIM, SAYS CHILD

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

The President has projected a plan to "decentralize" industry.

Courageous ideas by the President are at one time the reason for his election and the cause of his present hold upon the admiration of the nation.

Richard Washburn Child

Insiders have known for a long time that he has had in mind a movement that to encourage close-quarter industries, particularly the smaller, to go out of congested areas—where living conditions are bad, to semi-rural districts where workers may cultivate their own self-subsistence garden plots and find better air, recreation and ownership of real estate.

He had this in mind before election.

TAX INCOME IS PROBLEM

The more practical industrialists will be asking, of course, what will happen to the tax income of cities and to real estate and to the financial soundness of crowded municipalities, if factories in wholesale lots move away.

They will be asking in the projected conference on the subject after the President gets back just how the march is to begin.

Is the city equipment for production and distribution to be scrapped?

Does the movement to the smaller community imply lower wages, as it often has when the movement is purely voluntary?

What impulse and inducement is to be furnished for this dislocation by government, and if it costs something, who is to pay—the taxpayer?

ACCLAMATION IS PROBLEM

Will the city dweller take to the up-rooting and can he adapt himself to the after-hours plow, spade and weeder, the pulsing of crickets and the lack of a gregarious neighborhood?

Such questions will not be asked to challenge the intent of the plan nor to discredit the President's willingness to go to courageous lengths—even attempts to re-distribute population in a way which on the surface appears to serve the happiness of man.

Such questions are subordinate anyhow. The larger question is how fast and how far may government go in furnishing a new READY TO WEAR CIVILIZATION?

Steady and founded civilizations usually grow.

RECORDS AGAINST THEORY

No records show one as a success that came as a short-order off the grill, no matter how capable the rotissetie.

Russia and several nations in Europe have made a fashion of ready-to-wear civilizations — they are all "broke."

Desirability is not the only measure of things to be done.

Possibility is one measure, cost is another.

It may be desirable to have every family in the United States possessed of an artesian well.

The task, however, might be impossible and the PWA might bankrupt the United States in attempting these borings for water.

START OF OWN ACCORD

If normally civilization develops on the grounds of self-interest of production, economy, labor and the pursuit of happiness, the semi-rural trek with its rose vined cottage and teeming gardens may start of its own accord.

No one objects to the government using its blessings to such a new march of civilization.

But ready-to-wear civilizations put forward by planning boards are not emergency measures: They are frankly re-vamp plans for our civilization—a civilization that, whatever its intoxication of the [illegible] and disillusionment of the 30's, has outstripped any other in stability and advantages distributed to the greatest number of living souls.

IT REMAINS A TOUGH FIBRED, A PATIENT, AND RESILIENT CIVILIZATION, AS SURE OF A SUCCESSFUL TOMORROW AS THE RISING OF THE SUN!

To take the bull by the horns as the President did with the emergency was magnificent. To encourage the slow and careful steps toward a better distribution of people and industry may be a government function if used wisely.

READY TO WEAR IS MISFIT

But moves toward permanent infusions of natural growth of orderly civilizations by governments, either requiring the slightest signs of duress or the forced expenditure of taxpayers' money to make a ready-to-wear civilization are open to this comment:

NO READY TO WEAR CIVILIZATION HAS EVER FITTED HUMANITY.

Each European example has had to turn to its government planning boards and say—"Little men, what now?"

Tragedy Couple

FREDA McKECHNIE

ROBERT EDWARDS

Freda McKechnie, 26, shown above, met death at the hands of Robert Edwards, in lake near Wilkes-Barre, Pa., in what police term a close parallel with the book, "An American Tragedy."

Acting Mayor Camera Shy

With Mayor Mansfield off on a motor trip through New York State, and with John F. Dowd, president of the City Council, vacationing on Cape Cod, City Clerk Wilfred J. Doyle today found himself acting mayor of Boston. Said he:

"It's a nuisance. Every photographer in town is after me. I don't like to have my picture taken. And, besides, it keeps me from my work."

4 Million Given To State Welfare

More than four million dollars of federal money has been distributed to cities and towns of the state for use in public welfare and civil works by State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, it was announced today.

From this latest, and said to be last, federal disbursement, Boston received more than $1,000,000, with Chelsea getting $41,000; Quincy, $53,000; and Cambridge $85,000.

TRIANGLE NOW COMPLETE IN TRAGEDY

By International News Service

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Aug. 3—The "other girl" in the triangular "American tragedy" slaying that claimed the life of Freda McKechnie, today sped to the side of her accused fiance, Robert Edwards, with protestations of innocence.

She is Margaret Crain, 23, a music teacher, of East Aurora, N. Y.

Edwards, 21, a mine surveyor, and she were to be married, but Freda, 26, who would have become a mother in five months, stood in the way, according to police.

The Crain girl, it is reported here, as she left the home of her brother in Rochester, N. Y., to speed to the aid of Edwards, cried repeatedly:

"It's a lie, it's a lie."

KILLED IN ROWBOAT

Authorities said Edwards admitted killing Freda with a blackjack as they sat in a rowboat in Harvey's Lake last Monday night discussing their snarled fates.

Hoping to lead authorities to believe Freda's death was accidental, police said, he left her body clad in a bathing spit in the shallow waters of the lake.

Edward's latest statement, the last of a series of many rambling explanations he had given to police, permitted authorities to draw an ever closer parallel with the book, "An American Tragedy," and the actual crime upon which it was based.

ROMANCE DISCUSSED

Edwards told police he made a "date" with Freda Monday night, and they drove to the lake to discuss their romance. When he told her he was in love with another girl, Miss McKechnie fainted.

While she was unconscious, police asserted, young Edwards struck her on the head, threw her body into the water and then, panic-stricken, threw the girl's street clothes from his parked car into a clump of bushes.

SWEDISH NAVAL SHIP HERE

White-winged against the gray morning, and a sight to warm the hearts of old sailor men, the full-rigged Swedish naval training ship af Chapman, arrived in the lower harbor today and proceeded in tow of a tug to the Navy Yard at Charlestown.

Carrying 190 Swedish sea cadets destined to be officers in the merchant marine, the af Chapman appeared unexpectedly off quarantine while the coast guard cutter Ossipee, was seeking her in response to a radio message that said she was becalmed.

Beides the cadets, the big three master carries 14 officers and a crew of 60. She is on a five months' training cruise and will remain in Boston six days.

Af Chapma is the first Swedish naval vessel to visit Boston in 27 years. Her officers, crew and cadets will be guests at several functions planned by city and state tees. Her last port was San Juan, Porto Rico, from which she stiled on July 23.

12 Army Bombers at Alaska Field

Anchorage, Alaska, Aug. 3 (AP)—Twelve big army bombers, engaged in an aerial survey of Alaska, were based at Anchorage today. They arrived late yesterday from Fairbanks.

Lieut.-Col. Henry M. Arnold, commander of the expedition, said the squadron would start back for Washington, D. C., about August 12, after photographic surveys.

U. S. PLANS NEW ANTI-PLANE DEFENSES

Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 3—The War Department has perfected plans to encircle the United States with anti-aircraft defenses.

The plans will be laid before the next session of Congress. They call for the newest thing in anti-aircraft guns, searchlights and fire control equipment for: Eight regular army regiments; seven national guard regiments; nineteen inactive regular army regiments.

The disclosure follows studies by War Department experts, who called American anti-aircraft defenses inadequate.

Secretary of War Dern is described as feeling the Panama Canal is lacking in defense against enemy aircraft.

Army men are moving to strengthen their air forces, also the Air Corps has submitted a program to buy about 1000 planes to bring its fleet up to 2340.

Congress has the say about providing the money. Although the program is designated for 1936, it is not expected that more than 500 planes will be purchased that fiscal year; that, with other purchases already planned for the interim, would give the Army 1,800 serviceable planes.

Light Consumers Discuss New Rates

Municipal Plant Cheaper, Newton Woman Says

What do Mr. and Mrs. Consumer—the folks who pay the bill—think about the new deal in electric light rates?

To get a picture of the public's reaction to the Utilities Department order that reduces light rates from 7½ to 7 cents a kilowatt hour but forces users to buy their own bulbs, a Boston Evening American reporter asked a few persons at random about it.

Said Mrs. Edwin A. Pitt, 233 Bellevue street, Newton:

"I come from Eugene, Ore., where they have a municipal electric light and water supply system that operates most successfully. We pay infinitely less there for electricity than does Boston. I think if Boston had such a system, it would be possible to reduce rates so drastically that the necessity of purchasing bulbs would not bother the consumer in the least."

Barbara Dugan

Miss Barbara Dugan, 280 W. Fourth street, Boston:

"The ten bulbs at our four-room apartment usually burn about $2.50 worth of electricity monthly. As I figure it, we'll probably break about even."

Mrs. Betty Freedman, 57 Joy street, declared:

"I use at least 15 electric bulbs annually in my six-room apartment, so naturally the Edison Company's decision to discontinue their free bulb service concerns me seriously. I am quite certain that the company will be the gainer through the new order of things."

Miss May McEachern, 204 Day street, Jamaica Plain:

"As usual when the verdict is in favor of the public in any public vs. public utilities case the latter always wins. It's just one of those unfathomable things that the innocent bystander never seems to be able to get through his head. I can't seem to understand it, although I was always quick at school."

May McEachern

Miss Dorothy Campbell, 80 Gardenia street, Brighton.

"My folks were discussing the matter at breakfast. They decided that this so-called 'rate reduction' will be a total loss as far as we are concerned. This is the situation: while our bill averages $3 a month, we have 24 bulb outlets in our 7-room apartment so that the little we save on lighting will be more than consumed on purchasing bulbs."

Miss Winifred Collins, 331 Boston avenue, Medford:

"What is the poor, dumb public to do in such a situation? It seems to me that the Massachusetts Department of Public Utilities was instituted for the sole pudpose of protecting the public. If my recollection is correct, it certainly has forgotten its reason for being."

Mrs. William Benick, 66 Robinhood avenue, Jamaica Plain:

"The public utilities department's order that the Edison Company discontinue its free bulb service does not seem at all unfair to me because in Germany, where I was born and from which I have just returned from my regular annual visit, we have always been required to pay for our electric light bulbs. In fact, this practice prevails throughout Europe."

Mrs. Wm. Benick

HARVARD GRAD DIES IN LEAP

Edward Remington Grinnell, a former resident of Falmouth and a graduate of Harvard, 1914, was probably despondent over ill health when he took his own life after a previous unsuccessful attempt, Mrs. George Fisher, of Landon street, Cambridge, a friend of his, declared today.

Mrs. Fisher said Grinnell, who was about 40 years old, had left New England for Folensa, Island of Mallorca, in the Mediterranean, after suffering with acute sinus trouble for several years. According to reports, he met his death by jumping from an upper window of his home there.

He was the son of the late Charles J. Grinnell of Woods Hole and his mother is reported to be an invalid confined in a Greater Boston hospital. Plans for disposal of the body could not be learned today.

Newton's Mayor Fills Two Posts

Appointment of two new department heads was announced today by Mayor Sinclair Weeks, in Newton. Alderman Joseph J. Murray has been named water commissioner at a salary of $4500, succeeding Richard A. Ellis, who became director of public works. Charles A. Mahoney, 18 years a division foreman, was named street commissioner.

U. S. Plans to Balk Wild Cat Speculation in Food

Copyright by the Associated Press

Washington, Aug. 3—The government disclosed plans today to thwart wild cat speculation or "corners" in the nation's food, in the aftermath of the drouth.

Perhaps the most potent weapon is power under the AAA to buy surpluses of farm commodities for future use, thereby striking a blow at any attempt to kite prices because of relative scarcity. The foods thus bought by the Government could be distributed to the needy, resold through commercial channels, or shipped into areas where needed.

For the immediate future, officials predict that supplies will be ample and prices relatively low. This is due to heavy marketings, particularly of livestock, which the drouth threatened to kill.

Through the winter, though, the normal reaction would be smaller food supplies and higher prices. The administration will try to level off this variation, guarantee ample supplies for all sections and prevent wide fluctuations in prices.

"Security lies somewhere between glut and scarcity," said Victor A. Chritgau, acting farm administrator.

The Consumers Counsel of the AAA, headed by Dr. Fred C. Howe, will seek to prevent consumers from being "pinched" by high prices.

Dog Chases Man to Top of Auto

Attacked by a dog while at work in his garage at Fellsway West and Valley street, Medford, George Murphy climbed to the roof of an auto and remained there until others, aroused by the commotion, called police. Patrolmen William Sulivan and Joseph Johnson shot the dog.

Nomination Papers Cheap in Malden

Nomination papers are being circulated in Malden at a rate of bout three cents per name during the current campaign, the lowest figure reported ever paid for obtaining signatures to papers.

Women Gather to Lead War on War

Paris, Aug. 3 (INS)—The international women's congress against war and fascism will open in Paris tomorrow with more than 1000 delegates from around the world, including 22 from the United States.

The conference, which will last three days, will bring together representatives from Japan, China, Australia, England, Germany, Italy, Norway, France, and the U. S. S. R.

Melrose to Pay Water Burst Cost

BOY DIES, METAL BLOWN IN NECK

Westerly, R. I., Aug. 3—John Grills, 9, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grills, died at Westerly Hospital from infection caused when a piece of metal was blown into his neck on July 4. His death occurred during an operation for removal of the metal.

The injury was suffered when a firecracker exploding under a tin can drove a piece of the can into the boy's neck.

Maine Schoolboy Refused Pardon

Agusta, Me., Aug. 3—Merle W. Hughes of Augusta, sent to the reformatory Feb. 28, 1934, as a participant in an attempt with two other Agusta high school boys to extort money from William P. Viles of Augusta, was denied a pardon by Governor Louis J. Brann and the executive council.

Given in Marriage

—By Adele Garrison—

Madge, having assured the young lovers that she will aid them in the fight for their own honeymoon plans, enlists Lillian s aid.

CHAPTER 105

I MADE what might be called a dramatic pause before giving Mary and Noel an outline of my intended argument to Philip Veritzen, as I had said I would. As I hoped that they would interpret it as such a pause, and would not guess the truth—that I had no real idea of just what I would say to the great producer when I approached the ticklish task of interfering with his carefully thought out but flamboyant plans for their honeymoon.

But their eyes suddenly hopeful, fixed attentively upon me with that trusting confidence which is seen at its best in children and puppies, would have been a spur to anyone's wits. I must not disappoint them, I told myself, even as I found a plan rushing into my mind.

"If we can save those first five days for which you have planned, only substituting the wonderful new car for the old one, and can limit your social appearances and sojourn at his friends' houses to one or two nights, will you be willing to spend the days that are left at his Palm Beach villa, as he has planned for you?"

Mary's answer was a dive for me, and an ecstatic hug that robbed me of speech and breath. "Will I be willing?" she cried. "Just watch us! Eh, Noel? This is just like having your cake and eating it, too. Isn't that what they used to tell us when we were little? A Palm Beach villa, with the trimmings my prospective papa has outlined, won't be half bad, will it, old dear? And it will be pure velvet."

SAVE THEIR HONEYMOON

Mary's imagination was patently intrigued with the Palm Beach picture, if the original honeymoon plan could be saved, but I surmised that Noel was not so enthusiastic. However, his answer was prompt and asserting.

"I don't care what we do in the extra time," he said, "just so those five days can be saved to us."

"I'll do the best I can," I t 'd them. "Now go back into the living room and watch your chance to send Mrs. Underwood in here. Tell her I won't keep her five minutes, but I must see her that long as soon as possible."

They hurried away, and almost immediately afterward Lillian came into the study.

"I understand that there's a four alarm fire on," she said with a grin.

"Sit down," I said, pushing a chair over to her.

"Don't dare" she said, putting her elbows on the top of it and looking down at me over its back. "Old Phil whispered to me when he came back a few minutes ago that he wanted to flee the coop again in a little while, and to have me cover his retreat again.

"I gather that he came back because he feared your revered mother-in-law would miss him, but he needn't have worried. Your father is in splendid for and he's trying his best to keep her so near the verge of defeat that she has no thought or eyes for anything else."

THE CONSPIRACY

"What I have to tell you won't take very long," I said and I quickly outlined my dilemma as to the honeymoon. She heard me in silence, and when I finished she pursed her lips and gave a long musical whistle.

"You are up a tall tree with the ladder jerked away," she said. "When Phil gets his mind 'sot' on any plan he has old James Fitz James, with his 'Come one, come all, this rock shall fly from its firm base as soon as I,' lashed to a mast. And did I hear you aright, lady? Do you expect me to try to change the block of concrete he calls his mind?"

"I want you to help me talk to him, yes," I said steadily, knowing full well she has to get a certain amount of nonsense out of her system before she really approaches a subject.

"All right," she said with sudden capitulation. "When?"

"Before he goes home."

"Which won't be until after midnight, from the looks of things at present," she added. "Mother Graham is determined to take him on at cribbage, after she finishes this series with your father, and the Lord He alone knows when that will be. You have to talk to him about Avis [illegible] and the missing letter, too, haven't you?"

THE STOLEN LETTER

"Hush!" I cautioned, looking nervously around. "He may suspect something, but he has no ground for belief that I know anything of Miss Arlen's connection with the affair."

"Don't be too sure," she said. "That old fox has eyes in the back of his head and ears on his forehead. But this is beside the point. Get the missing letter thing over with, and then, just before Phil goes home, we'll give him some of your coffee. He'd sell his soul any time for a cup of good coffee. And then we'll tackle him.

"In the meantime, I'll try to think of some holy blackmail which I can add to your very efficient scheme; but don't be too hopeful, child, and—don't be too abrupt. Save your fire till you see the whites of his eyes. So long. I'll be seeing you!"

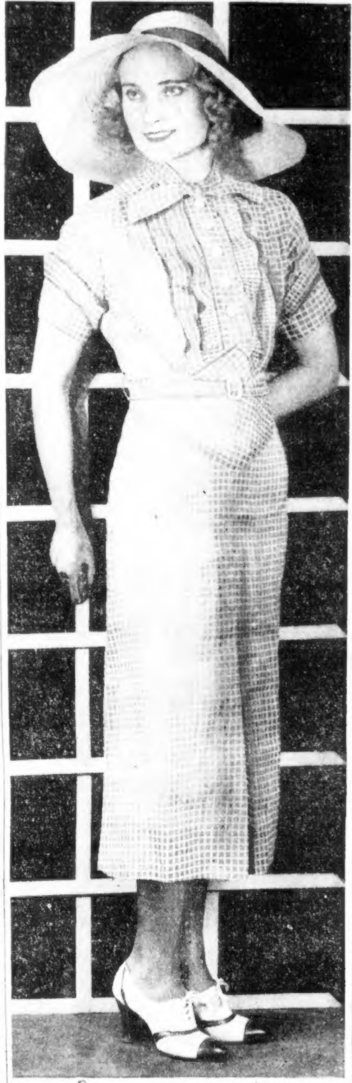
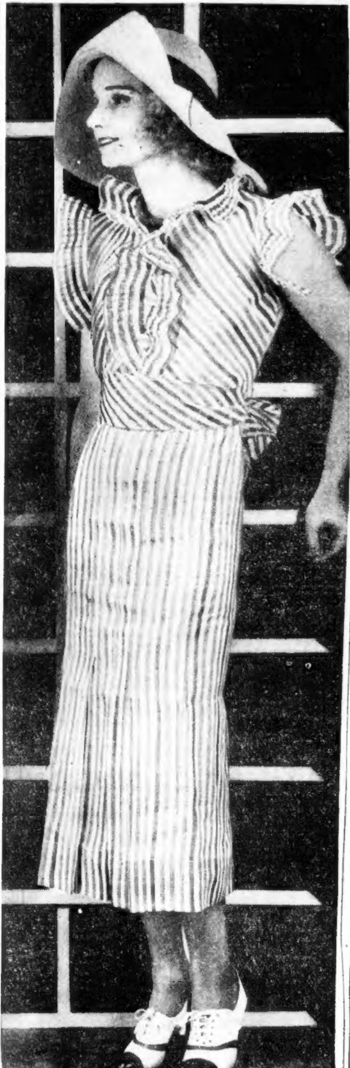
BEAUTY FINDS SOLVE MANY A PROBLEM OF STAYING FRESH AND SWEET

Meet August Hot Days in a Crisp Flourish of Organdy





ON DAYS that are no farewell to summer, and there are plenty ahead, if you have ready and waiting fresh and sparkling organdy frocks like these, there'll be none of the hateful tag-end feeling that always goes with faded, worn summer clothes. Clear green organdy, trellised in white, with exquisite shirtmaker detail, is modelled for us by Janet Sprague Treat. Miss Treat is the lovely leading lady of Mrs. Larz Anderson's newest play "Freedom," which is to be presented at the Fo'cas'le, in Marblehead, August 6 and 7, in aid of the Children's Island Sanitarium. It will be a gay and notable event of the North Shore social season. See the next paragraph for further details on the frock, which is from a Boston shop.

CANDY-STRIPED organdy in peach, coral and yellow may be your challenge to days that leave everyone around you a bit bedraggled. Pleated ruffles stand out from the neck and shoulders. Bias-worked stripes on the bodice and horizontal handling in the skirt make for perfect fitting. Both the frocks modelled by Miss Treat are from a Boston shop, and are an amazing mid-summer find, for something less than two dollars —which sum, need we tell you, is governed by the lateness of the season. They are not apt to stay in town long, so if you wish to know more about them, phone Annice Brink, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Counter Defense Against An Opening Pre-Emptive Bid

By Josephine Culbertson

The best line of counter-attack against an Opening Pre-emptive or semi-Pre-emptive bid is often difficult to decide, particularly when a hand is one only fairly strong in honors and these honors in short suits. Sometimes a player is driven by the exigencies of such a situation to the making of a bid which appears radically unsound but actually upon analysis is found to be eminently correct. Take the situation always recurring in Rubber Bridge where one side has a part-score.

East, Dealer.

Neither side vulnerable; East-West part-score 40.

♠ Q 10 7
♡ K 10 6 4
◇ A
♣ A Q 10 3 2

♠ J 9 6 5 4 3

◇ J 10 9 8 7 4 3 2
♣ K 5

♠ A K
♡ J 9 8 7
◇ K Q
♣ J 9 8 7 6

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
3 ◇ (1)	3 ♡ (2)	Pass (3)	4 ♡ (4)
Pass	Pass	Pass (5)

(1) It must be admitted that East has extremely poor material based on honor strength to defend his part-score. He has, it is true, an eight-card suit with not over three losers even against the worst possible distribution, but outside of that his trick-taking hopes are based only on the club King. Of course, his partner has yet to speak and may have a very fine hand, but East feels that he can take no chances with his trickless monstrosity of permitting North and South to get together cheaply.

(2) South is on the spot. He has, of course, the alternative of passing and thereby probably surrendering the first game on the rubber to his adversaries, but after much thought he decides to bid his four-card heart suit, weak though it is, with the thought in the back of his mind that he may bid four clubs if doubled. The bid is dangerous but South feels that the great bulk of the honor strength not in his own hand is in the hand either of his partner or of West.

(3) West has strong hopes of defeating a game contract if South undertakes it. He has, of course, no Raise for his partner, and in view of the Opening three-diamond bid, three spades with his weak six-card suit appears dangerous in the extreme.

(4) Of course, North does not know how weak his partner's forced Overcall was. The Raise to game with his fine hand is quite obvious.

(5) West's hand is not strong enough to double.

West opened a diamond in response to his partner's bid, which, of course, was won with the singleton Ace in Dummy. A small spade was then returned, South winning with the King. A small heart was led, and West went up with the Ace immediately.

While he suspected that East might have held a singleton spade, he was quite sure that he now held no more trumps as South could scarcely have bid on less than four hearts to the Jack. Hoping to secure a ruff, he now led his singleton club. South went up with the Ace, and laid down the King of hearts. While it seemed reasonably certain that a finesse against the Queen would win, South could see his contract assured even though he conceded West an unnecessary trick.

After leading the heart King and thus determining the trump situation, he led a club from Dummy. East won and West discarded his remaining diamond. East, of course, continued the diamond but it was of no avail. If West trumped, Dummy would overtrump, and if West discarded South would win the diamond trick and lead a trump. West's only remaining trick was the trump Queen and it made no difference whether he took it now or later.

The semi-Pre-emptive bid had accomplished one purpose. It had put North and South into a dangerous contract. Five clubs, of course, can be made without difficulty, and is the logical contract to be undertaken. However, hampered by the unusual line of attack, South probably did as well with the situation as could be expected.

Pair Secretly Wed Tell the "News"

By Mrs. Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly advise me which is the proper method to announce a secret marriage which took place several months ago? Is it proper for the bride's parents to send out engraved wedding announcements to friends of the family, friends of the bride, the groom and mutual friends of both the bride and the groom? If so, should these announcements follow, the same form as though the marriage had been recent.

There is no rule about this, and it is for the bride and her family to decide what they would prefer doing. Many people feel, and quite wisely too, I think, that if there is too long a time between the marriage and the announcement there is a certain degree of poor taste in sending formal announcements. They feel, and again, rightly, I believe, that since the marriage was so unconventionally circumstanced, the more informally the news is "spread" the less attention will be called to the unconventionality.

If you agree with this point of view, then the thing to do is to tell the relatives on both sides, at once, by word of mouth if possible, or by letter if they live too far away, and then tell the friends of both. And you'll find that the news will spread fast enough, without benefit of formal announcements.

However, there is nothing incorrect about sending these formal announcements. If they are sent, they are worded just as if they were sent directly after the ceremony, that is, the wording must include the date of the marriage and the place at which it took place:

Like this:

Mr. and Mrs. (Bride's parents) announce the marriage of their daughter
Patricia
to Mr. Alan James Roberts on Tuesday, the first of June
Nineteen hundred and thirty-three
Wheeling, West Virginia

Hot Weather Tips, and News of Antiseptic Powder That Refreshes

(Posed by Shirley Ross)

By Juliet Shelby

TO LOOK as fresh as a daisy, keep cool as a leaf and to smell sweet as a flower, are not simple tasks when the weather is torrid! Yet these things are expected of every girl who wants to be sought after or wants to be loved. So not many of us can afford not to live up to these social demands!

If personal daintiness is important to you, and it should be, you will never think of donning a dress without first using a deodorant—especially during these warm days. Let me give you the name of a delightful one that is slightly perfumed and boasts of a soft wool applicator. By just swabbing your under-arms and shoulder blades with this delicate, refreshing lotion, you are not only assured protection, but you actually check perspiration for a time.

This lotion is quick drying, nonstaining and bears a reputed stamp of approval. You may use it as frequently as you desire, without fear of harming or irritating even the most sensitive skin.

A bottle of this, a daily tubbing, keeping your clothes fresh, and you will be the freshest, coolest, sweetest of them all.

If you don't know the merits of an antiseptic toilet powder, lend me your ear, for no woman should be without one.

First and foremost, and a fact that cannot be easily ignored, every girl at times finds it a problem to keep free of odor. For such times to have on hand a safe, effective antiseptic powder that prevents chafing while it deodorizes, is one of the greatest comforts that has come out of the twentieth century.

You sprinkle a new powder all over your body, as you would a talcum on your underthings, and especially wherever there is danger of chafing. It soothes because it is sweat-proof, and it is cooling and refreshing.

There is one such powder that is superior to most. Girls who go in for active sports swear by it.

I like to use it in my shoes, especially when I run around without hose. It prevents friction with shoe insoles and keeps my feet cool and dry. You probably will find new uses for it. Those who make it recommend it for use on rubber garments such as girdles and brassieres. They claim by sprinkling this powder on after washing them, you prolong their service.

This sealing antiseptic powder is safe to use at any time on any type of skin, old or young. You have the choice of three sizes, and the least you can do, if you are interested in combating the discomforts of perspiration, is to buy the smaller can and check up on the merits I have lauded here. It is most inexpensive.

The name of this antiseptic powder and the perfumed deodorant will be given you and also the stores that sell it, if you phone Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000.

If you prefer writing for this information send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Pure Olive Oil As Lubricant

Question: Would you give me your advice on the following? How often should the hair be washed? What will lubricate a dry skin? What causes dark circles under the eyes?

C. G., Marblehead.

Answer: You may wash your hair once every two weeks if you will brush it well and massage your scalp between shampoos. After you wash your face with warm water and very little soap, massage in a little pure olive oil. One or two drops will be sufficient to lubricate your dry skin

Superfluous Hair

Question: Can you tell me of a safe and permanent way to remove hair-growth from the upper lip? M. S.

Wellesley.

Answer: The only safe and permanent way of removing hair from the lip is by the electric needle. Then you must have an operator that is highly recommended. Many women try to bleach it with white henna; others pull each hair out separately with tweezers.

Jerome Finds Linda Missing But Finally Hears Her Singing in Distance

CHAPTER XXVII

Jerome had dreaded the necessity of mutilating the rare old Spanish chests. He was connoisseur enough to appreciate their beauty and antiquarian enough to estimate their value. Also he was sailor enough to feel a stab of superstition at the finding of the keys in a critical moment when something of infinitely greater beauty and value was threatened.

The diversion created by the sharp jingling had steadied Jerome. The chest keys suggested clothes and clothes suggested the responsibility of civilization. A man at home whose income had ceased should not take unto himself a wife until he could support her, so why do so anywhere.

Linda also had dreaded violating the chests, but for a different reason. She had come to accept the absent proprietor as the Lord of the island paradise, but no loving or merciful one. She thought of him as a beetle-browed tyrant with a shambok in one hand and a steel hook where the other belonged. She reasoned that nobody but an unholy terror would dare go off and leave valuable possessions unprotected.

The chances were that his name was known and dreaded all along the coast. The sign on the Tree of the Forbidden Fruit seemed to indicate as much. It promised immediate retribution, with no reference to name or address or the guilt or identity of the violator.

RELIEVED IN MIND

Thus relieved in mind and exhausted in body, they fell asleep much as good children do on Christmas Eve, when the excitement of a joyful situation is soothed by the fact of its benefits being close ahead. Every person of sense loves to savor happiness a little before its assimilation, and such a process is not arrested by sleep. The subconscious is happily aware of the bright promise, and diffuses the sense of benefaction.

Jerome was awakened by the macaw's: "Well, what in blazes do you want?" several times repeated. This impolite question appeared to be the extent of the bird's English diction. It was the sort of which one rendition might make a hit, and the second be still a laugh, if properly synchronized.

The macaw had so far kept within the line of demarkation that separates the comedian from the bore. It had accomplished this by absenting itself from the house premises until something appeared to be going on. Jerome reflected on the unconscious subtlety of putting on the single act in one's repertoire at a moment when it could make a hit, whatever the situation.

That he, reflected, was what had got the parrot species popularity, an ancient and lasting reputation for wisdom through what might be called the "reverse English," in this case, silence.

There were more people like that macaw he told himself, than there were macaws like that macaw. They had one line and it they were clever enough and self-contained enough to hold it until the right moment, their reputation became established.

It occurred to him then that the macaw for all its limitations and one-phrase boisterousness never delivered without an audience. Jerome got up and went out to see of what this audience might consist. There was none apparent. Yet the macaw, perched on its high branch, and entirely indifferent to such a dead-head as Jerome, kept on repeating at nicely timed intervals: "Well, what in blazes do you want?" Between these efforts it policed itself a little.

INVISIBLE AUDIENCE

The chances were, Jerome thought, that there was an audience invisible to himself in the bush, not far away. It could not be Captain Moriarty, because the greatest ambition of that Gentleman of Fortune had been to leave the island and report what he had found there. Even without such a report, he had urgently desired to leave the island. It could not be any of the gorilla family because the macaw was too used to them to waste elocution.

The macaw, Jerome decided, ust have been formerly the pet some English-speaking agent of a Central American port and a man who disliked any interruption to a siesta that was prolonged. His peevish interrogation had impressed itself on the bird's mimicry and, with that odd intelligence that birds possess, it had learned how to use that phrase whether to impress or to annoy.

The macaw had never shown the slightest friendliness nor even chumminess, which is a low-grade friendliness for mutual satisfaction. The social relationship of the macaw had been rather that of a neighbor who looks in only when something unpleasant is happening, not to help but to comment and then report. There was nothing endearing about the macaw.

It had never approached them more closely than its favorite branch about 20 feet overhead, from which it had seemed to watch them for awhile with prying scorn, then give a derisive cry and fly away.

Jerome now reflected that the macaw never ripped out its English vocalism except at something unusual, something of a trespass character. The bird's intelligence associated the query with the sudden appearance of somebody. But there was nobody to be seen about the premises.

JEROME ANNOYED

The sun was well up, which meant that it was already broad day. Jerome was annoyed at having overslept for the first time when there was so much to be done. They had to haul the dory out of the living room and work her down to the beach. This ought not to be difficult as the pitch of the stream was fairly steep and the stones in its bed smooth and slippery, in some places covered with moss.

He stepped inside to awaken Linda and rapped sharply at the door of her room, which was ajar. There was no answer. He rapped again, then looked inside. Linda was not there. The wooden shutters of a window were open, and its screen that was hung on hinges was also open. More startling still, the lid of one of the big richly carved chests that stood against the wall beside the window was raised, held up by props at either end.

Jerome's first emotion was anger at this Pandora box curiosity that had awakened Linda with the first light of dawn and driven her to see what might be in this handsomest of the chests. She might have awakened him when she found she could not wait.

Then he wondered why she had seen fit to slip out of the window. She knew he wished to get an early start for leaving the place. There was no sense in her letting him sleep on.

He was about to inspect the contents of the chest when he heard Linda's voice singing at some little distance. It was more of a throaty crooning, rather low of pitch but with a gay lilting note, and Jerome recognized the familiar refrain of the Lohengrin Wedding March.

This vocalism capped the oddity of her early matinal performance. With all they had to do, why get up with the dawn, open a single chest, then slip out of the window so as not to awaken him, and start the day by singing a wedding march? It was not the time nor place nor was there anything about the present situation to warrant such behavior. They ought by this time to be hard at work dragging the dory down the bed of the brook.

Your Cooking Problems

Question: "Would you tell me how to pan-broil a steak? My steaks are tough, in spite of the fact that other people are successful with the method I use."
Mrs. R. G., Lynn

Answer: The method that you are using is correct and is that given by most cook books. However, I think you will find it very helpful if after you have seared the meat on both sides and turned down the flame, cover your pan if you find your steak is tough. In this way you are steaming the meat slightly, which tends to make it much more tender and will not affect the flavor or texture of the meat as long as you have browned it thoroughly at first.

Question: Will you please tell me where I can get figs? They say here they are out of season, but I have seen fig squares with real fig filling in them at bake shops." Mrs. M. E. B. Waltham

Answer: Figs are not on the market right now. The bake shops probably made up the filling when the figs were in season and, as the housewife does at home with fresh fruits, have them to use at any time.

Here Is a Real Puzzler for You

Today—Count Each Line by Fours

Answer to yesterday's problem: A, Impossible; B, Possible.

Little Change in Foods and Prices for Week

From Martha Lee's Friday morning broadcast over Station WAAB.

There is little change in the foods and prices in the market this week-end as compared to last, although it is predicted that all food stuffs will be higher in price shortly.

Many delicious fish are still plentiful. Here are some of the prices on the most popular: Bluefish, firm and meaty, is 25 cents a pound; fresh Eastern salmon, 40 cents; small mackerel, 8 cents, large, 12 cents; swordfish, still very much in season with its meat firm and sweet-flavored, is selling for 35 cents; fillet of sole, 25 cents a pound and flounder at 10 cents. Those all-time favorites, haddock and cod, fresh in the market, are selling for 8 cents a pound.

FRESH CRAB FLAKES

Other items that seemed interesting were fresh crab flakes at 75 cents a pond and butterfish at 15 cents. The wise housewife will be rewarded for trying out some of the fish with which she is not familiar, for there are many good fish in the sea. They will be found to be as tasty as the ones she knows so well and can be cooked in the same way.

It is noted that lobster is lighter in price this weekend,—the boiled, 50 cents a pound, the live 35 cents and lobster meat $1.50 a pound. Some of the sections from which lobster comes in Nova Scotia are closed, which means that for the next month or so there will be a shortage of this delicious shellfish. More and more we are depending upon Nova Scotia for food supplies; this has a tendency to lower prices. Lobster would never be so reasonable in price as it has been in the last few years, unless there were large quantities coming from some such source.

The Nova Scotia blueberries are very fine and we had larger quantities of strawberries from there this last season. Their season for fruits and vegetables is later than ours, which enables them to send produce to this market, making these foods in season longer.

LAMB PLENTIFUL

Good beef is rather scarce, although there is much poor beef around. Lamb is still very much in season this weekend and selling for 21 cents a pound. Poultry of all kinds is very excellent, broilers, frying chicken, and roasters. We saw and tasted some very delicious ham from West Virginia. It is smoked, cured and cooked to a deliciousness which is difficult to obtain by cooking ham at home. The whole ham sells for 38 cents a pound and half ham 45 cents a pound. We will be very glad to tell you where it can be purchased.

There are all kinds of native vegetables—summer squash at 10 cents, parsnips at 15 cents, red onions at two pounds for 25 cents, carrots and corn. There is a great difference in the varieties of corn, some being very poor and some very fine in quality, so be sure and test it before buying.

FRUIT PRICES

The fruits also are numerous—raspberries selling at 18 cents a box, strawberries from California 20 cents, beautiful red malaga grapes at 25 cents, juicy California oranges from 50 cents to 75 cents and blueberries 30 cents to 45 cents. The price of cultivated berries has gone up this week-end, because they are not quite so plentiful as they have been in the last few weeks.

Peaches are coming in better and better all the time and will continue until they are at the height of their season. The Georgia peaches are selling around 30 cents a dozen. There will be very few native peaches because of the frosts of last winter.

Publishers War Upon NRA Board

Washington, Aug. 3 (INS)—Investigation of the newsprint industry by the Department of Justice was forecast today, as members of the American Newspaper Publishers Association gathered to protest creation of a "monopolistic" Newsprint Planning and Adjustment Board, with authority to fix prices and limit supply.

Colby declared the board proposal a violation of a Federal Court decree of 1917, which perpetually enjoined the industry from price-fixing.

$24,000,000 IN SILVER OUT

By Universal Service

Washington, Aug. 3—The treasury has embarked upon the issuance of new paper money against a backing of silver, and thus far has run off more than $24,000,000 of notes, Secretary Morgenthau announced here.

The treasury is turning out the new notes, pursuant to the Silver Purchase Act, just as fast as is possible, Morgenthau said.

But from the standpoint of currency inflation, Morgenthau is adhering to the treasury's conservative policy of limiting the new note issues to the amount which the treasury spends in buying silver to back them.

Girl Bares Factory Slavery in 'Flagrant' NRA Case

By Universal Service

New York, Aug. 3—Squalid sweatshop conditions and starvation wages were described here by a 16-year-old girl employed by a Bronx ribbon factory described by code officials as "the most flagrant" case of NRA violation on record.

Her testimony put the final stamp on an investigation begun in April by Frank O. Smith, NRA investigator, and a summons was issued for Meyer Abrams, owner of the mill.

The girl, Helen Rice, of the Bronx, said she lost eight pounds in the two months she was employed at the mill for a wage of $7 a week.

She said the 18 employes worked in a small one-room attic and so dark that electric lights burned constantly, she added.

"I came home every night with a headache. I was afraid of Mr. Abrams because he was always yelling, and if the machines broke he blamed us and we had to fix them on our own time."

Eight other employes gave a similar testimony, despite the alleged threat of their employer to "fire anyone who gave information to an NRA investigator."

Smith said:

"It was the custom to hire old men or young girls, many physically handicapped."

Records showed that the average wage was $5 for a 40-hour week.

TOO TIRED FOR THE PICNIC

—and then she smoked a CAMEL!

NOW... get back your energy quickly when you feel glum and weary!

Thousands of smokers have adopted this way of combating low energy and low spirits: when their energy sags down they smoke a Camel!

Their experience shows that smoking a Camel definitely increases your available energy, and does it quickly! And science has fully confirmed this wholesome "lift."

What happens is that Camels, through their "energizing effect," help the body to help itself. They are actually "turning on" your own natural energy, while you enjoy Camel's matchless blend of costlier tobaccos. So, whenever you want to drive away fatigue or "the blues," just remember to "get a lift with a Camel."

Soon you are yourself again, comforted and refreshed, with all the vim and vigor that are naturally yours!

No Jangled Nerves! You can enjoy the "snap-back" in energy that Camels offer as often as you want. For the finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS in Camels never get on the nerves!

"When I think I can't go another step—then I call a halt and smoke a Camel. A Camel picks me up and gives me the energy to push on."

WILLYS STINGY, SAYS EX-WIFE

By DOROTHY ROE

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Aug. 3—Reports that John N. Willys, 61-year-old motor magnate, paid upwards of $7,000,000 for his marital freedom were denied when Isabel Van Wie Willys announced that no settlement had been made upon her at the time of her divorce last week.

While the white-haired Willys honeymooned at the modest Long Island home of his new and younger bride, the first Mrs. Willys issued the following statement through her attorney, Charles H. Tuttle:

"This divorce was procured by me because I could no longer endure his cruel and humiliating conduct.

"It is not true that in connection with this divorce any settlement has been made by Mr. Willys for the benefit of my daughter. I asked him to make some provision for her in view of the divorce, but he declined.

"In my suit I asked for no alimony and received none, and no settlement was made upon me. Outside of $10,000 to care for certain immediate financial necessities and outside of his repayment of a small loan made at his request, nothing whatever was paid to me."

Italians Happy in New Air Program

Rome, Aug. 3 (AP)—Air-minded Italy rejoiced today at Premier Mussolini's decision to keep pace with England, the United States and other countries in an aircraft construction program.

The decision was made known through an appropriation decree published by the Official Gazette allotting 1,200,000,000 lire (about $100,000,000) for extraordinary expenses connected with Italy's aerial defense. A similar decree provided for the expenditure of 3[illegible] lire (approximately $[illegible]) for its already large naval construction budget.

The cigarette paper has a lot to do with how a cigarette burns and tastes

It's like this:

You get the right kind of flax paper, made by the right machinery, and made by experienced people, and it helps to make a cigarette burn right and taste right.

The paper for Chesterfield is the best that money can buy. It is tested for three things...

Purity
The right burning quality
No taste or odor

The right paper adds to Chesterfield's milder better taste.

WOMAN DIES IN BACK BAY CRASH

This Is Life by ROBERT E. ROGERS

Robert E. Rogers

Is there, I wonder, some Methodist or Presbyterian saint whose feast day in the calendar demands to be celebrated, around the first of August, with lawn parties? I crave to know, because on that official opening of the dog day season I saw no less than three such festivities within a radius of fifty miles from this old village of Sandy Bay. And the local paper swarms with advertisements warning all and sundry of lawn parties to come.

The three I saw along the road side were all cut to one pattern and all reminded me a little pathetically of that one celebrated by Mr. Woollcott, who fiddles while Rome burns. That one, you will remember, was the colored church that advertised the "Annual Strawberry Festival," a footnote to the sign adding plaintively,

"Owing to the depression Prunes will be served."

This New England nonconformist saint who is honored so regularly as August rolls around—she must have been Saint Tabitha or Saint Dorcas or Saint Peace and Plenty—was obviously a good housekeeper of the old tradition, as described in the Book of Proverbs. She saw to it that no one in the neighborhood beat her in getting out an early wash on Mondays. Her ironing was done before the heat of the day on Tuesdays. Her immaculate house was made still more immaculate Fridays. And her Saturday bakings of breadstuffs, pies, cakes and beans were famous in the land.

In the winter she was the mainstay of the Ladies' Aid in its heroic attempts to pay for the new church carpet by serving the monthly twenty-five-cent suppers of cold ham, cold corned beef, sweet pickles, baked beans, brown-bread, Parker House rolls, marble cake, coffee, with pineapple icecream ten cents extra.

And in her spare time she knitted, quilted, crocheted, tatted, hooked rugs, and did drawn lace work in preparation for the pre-Christmas fair and the August lawn party.

Her feast is celebrated as follows: The somewhat small and scrubby grass plot in front of the church and bordering on the street is solemnly mowed. Then the janitor, Brother Asa Frye, who also blows the organ and assists at odd jobs for the elect, brings out the long yellow settees from the vestry, assisted by the small boys, whose mothers are Ladies Aiders and who perspire willingly at these chores because such duties give them not to be despised perquisites around the lemonade bowl and the ice cream tubs. Also the saw horses and trestles, which the ladies cover with fair white paper, weighted down with cobbles.

Then all the elder female saints of the parish appear in black silk and occupy the settees—probably the hardest and most uncomfortable seats known to man—acting apparently as a board of supervision and censorship of the proceedings. At least nothing escapes their vision and little escapes their comment. The minister's wife, who is young and idealistic, coerces her husband into hanging a few Japanese lanterns, in the faint hope of giving a New England gathering the atmosphere of something in Japan or Venice. Her hope is never fulfilled, because the great white glaring street light immediately in front of the church makes it obviously unnecessary to light the lanterns at all.

As the afternoon wears on, the tables grow splendid, laden with products of the kitchen and the sewing room. There are cakes, frosted and unfrosted, fruited and unfruited, cookies, jumbles, doughnuts ringed and twisted, and an occasional pie. There are jars of jams and jellies, pickles and preserves, their labels written in spidery handwriting in pale brown ink—in guarantee of their genuineness, as made from an original recipe by a lady who has been winning first prizes at the local fair since Grant took Richmond or thereabouts.

There is another table with aprons—pronounced aperns—both working and dress-up—and towels and doilies (which visiting vacationers from New York call "derlies"), to say nothing of wash rags knitted by Grandma Hudson, who is in her nineties and can read without glasses, and those stuffed things you wrap around hot saucepan handles, as well as the more decorative pieces of fancy work which are to be spread out in the parlor and never used for anything.

And there is the ice cream and lemonade table, almost lost to sight in a cloud of buzzing flies and a ring of buzzing small boys and girls, hoping against hope that the ice cream will not sell well and will have to be given away (when the curfew rings) to properly accredited parties—i. e., to such boys as lugged the settees out and will lug them back again.

All afternoon the old ladies will sit and the younger ladies will bustle about and the summer boarders will pass remarks and haggle and buy odds and ends, protesting in alien accents at the dreadfulness of these rural prices, and the small boys and girls will get underfoot and yammer—and the auditorium carpet will be so much more nearly paid for.

So is Saint Tabitha honored in August, not with pageantry and light and color and music and beauty and gayety, as the heathen do, but in a sober, economical, chaste and utilitarian manner, as befits the descendants of the Dissenters who settled these parts and established our customs—and are still carrying on.

Husband Freed Nine Years After Filing Divorce

It took Oswald A. Boehm of Lawrence nine years from the time he filed divorce papers in Salem probate court to get an official decree, but today he had it at last, and that was the main thing.

Opposition hadn't blocked the road to freedom, but the decree just hadn't been entered. It was a good thing [illegible] Boehm was told about that, too, because he thought everything was all right eight years ago, after he had testified. He thought he was eligible to remarry, too.

Boehm's "ex" is Mrs. Mildred J Boehm, also of Lawrence. She was accused of improper conduct with Herbert H Illingworth of Methuen at Salisbury Beach in 1912.

MACHINE HITS STEEL UPRIGHT ON BRIDGE

Mrs. Edith Loughman of 70 Chiswick road, Brighton, mother of two children, was instantly killed and her companion, Warren W. Wood, 1 of Hammondswood road, Chestnut Hill, was seriously injured when their automobile crashed head-on into a steel upright on the railroad bridge on Beacon street near Kenmore square.

The woman, the divorced wife of John J. Loughman of Walbridge street, Brighton, was employed as a telephone operator at a Congress street brokerage office.

Wood was taken to the City hospital where it was found that he had a fractured skull, numerous lacerations and possible internal injuries. His name is on the danger list.

BOYS ARRANGE RITES

At Mrs. Loughman's home police found two young boys, Philip, 14, and Raymond, 12. They said they were the dead woman's sons.

Accompanied by an agent for the insurance company, the two boys left home today to make funeral arrangements for their mother.

CAR CRUSHED

The car was crushed like an eggshell and Wood was pinned by the wreckage. But the woman was hurled clear. Officials said she was dead when her body struck the street.

G. O. P. BATTLE ON PUBLICITY

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

A rift between the "Big Three," heading the G. O. P. ticket, over advertising matter on display at the Republican state headquarters is coming to the surface.

Campaign buttons and stickers bearing the names of Lieutenant Gaspar G. Bacon for governor and former State Treasurer John W Haigis of Greenfield for lieutenant governor is the cause of the furore.

Friends of Robert M. Washburn of Boston, the convention endorsed candidate for United States Senator, feel that Washburn has been slighted by failure to include his name on the material.

Officials explained that there is nothing unusual in the situation that in every campaign buttons and stickers have been put out with only the names of the two candidates for top places on the state ticket shown. It is planned, they said, in later campaign material to include the senatorial candidate's name.

An interesting development in the political situation is the fact that former Mayor William Weeks of Everett is on the stump for former Mayor James M. Curley in the campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

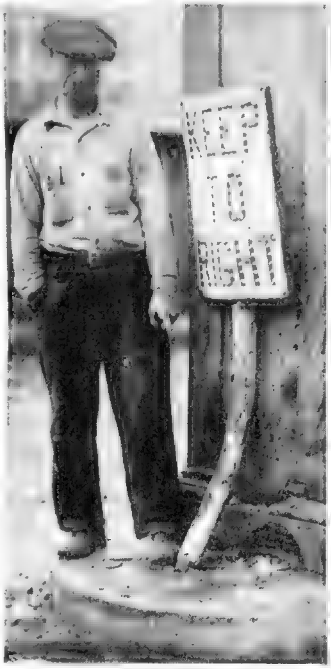
Weeks is one of the ablest speakers in the Republican party and stumped the state time and again for former Senator William M. Butler.

Hultman Served With Taxi Writ

Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman today had a writ of mandamus served on him by Suffolk Deputy Sheriff John Horgan on behalf of Henry W. Lawler, Mattapan taxicab operator.

The writ seeks to force the commissioner to rescind an order that deprived Lawler of his two-car-cab stand in Mattapan square on July 31. It is returnable August 8.

Where Crash Caused Death



JOSEPH SPENCER

"Keep to Right" said the sign. According to police, Warren W. Wood of Hammondswood did not do so on the railroad bridge on Beacon street. So Mrs. Edith Loughman of Brighton is dead today. Wood's auto crashed into a steel upright. Crash was heard by Joseph Spencer. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Rain Smashes Heat Waves; More Showers Coming

After a humid and sticky forenoon, relief was on its way today to Boston's heat-frazzled nerves and sun-tanned lawns.

Showers were on tap for the afternoon and early evening, according to the weather bureau forecast. They are to be followed by a definite drop in the temperature tonight.

A breeze, shifting from southwest into northwest, was expected to bring cooler weather from the Canadian interior before it faded away.

RAIN LOWERS MERCURY

Three hours of heavy rain last night—.36 inches—forced the mercury down a bit earlier in the day, and was a boon to growing things, but afforded little relief as it left the air saturated with moisture.

At 10 a. m. the humidity was 91 against a normal 71.

The downpour began at about 3 a. m., slowly letting up shortly after 6 o'clock. Unlike the thunder showers a week or so ago, this rain was persistent and heavy.

Other sections of the country have had rain, too, but it came in the form of storms that left a total of eight dead and a million dollars property damage along the Great Lakes and in parts of the Atlantic seaboard.

A [illegible] ed in [illegible] Thursday by a wind and rain storm which later swept [illegible] Ontario and northern Ohio.

TOWN WITHOUT WATER

Bridgeton, N. J., was isolated for 4 hours by floods which left the town without drinking water.

Eight houses in a summer colony near Baltimore, Md., were shattered by a tornado, and marooned half the people. Relief came with falling of high tide on the Cohansey River.

C[illegible] in [illegible] Ohio were washed out by [illegible] in other parts of Ohio and in New York state they were [illegible].

Farmers of Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois however still scanned the skies anxiously for signs of rain.

O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

O. O. McIntyre

New York, August 3—Thoughts while strolling: Still a few international bankers at large. Senator Pat Harrison and Cecil B. DeMille look alike. I'm always getting the Rialto and Rivoli theaters mixed. L[illegible] dimple. Whatever became of vaudeville's "blue streak" Rae Samuels?

One word [illegible] Warren W[illegible]. Will someone teach department store elevators runners how to pronounce '[illegible]'? And then call Billy Rose aside about his pronunciation of Cafe de Paris over the radio. Washington square cops, too need etiquette lessons. B. H Rolfe is remindful of John Bunny.

White vests again, hey, hey! The prettily named new editor of Harper's Bazaar—Carmel Snow. [illegible] Hendrik Willem Van Loon has rounded in, appropriate term, from the Orient. Thyra Samter Winslow sounds like a run down step[illegible]. It's smart to be thrifty.

Nobody ever excited the tabloids like Daddy Browning. Does anyone ever actually know New York? Not more than a dozen theatrical press agents left. Overheard: "Maybe it would have been better if Columbus had not discovered the country!" Gene Tunney's twinkling expression.

One of my favorite people—Paul de Kruif. A singing comer on the radio—Jane Froman. George Jessel has shed the Gus Edwards juvenile look. Maybe those cigars age him. Ward Morehouse's quick Buddha grin. The overwhelming Central Park South skyline again. I'll stand and brood awhile.

Will Cuppy has been called the world's funniest writer by P. G. Wodehouse, who is to many the world's funniest writer. But the highlight of Cuppy's life was when he walked along Park avenue one day with Gene Tunney when the latter was a champion. A car passed and a woman yelled, "Look, there's Will Cuppy!"

Nearly all the haphazard luncheon clubs that brought good fellows together in Wall street, the wholesale jobbers and other districts, as well as along Broadway have scattered. For years the motion picture folk convened in the Astor Hunting Room. Joe Webber and Lew Fields presided. The press agents grouped at Sardi's, the booking agents at Lindy's. Novelists at the Coffee House. Times have blown many lunchers to other cities, other jobs. The Dutch Treat still holds its luncheon of the literary crowd, but that is every Tuesday only.

Never in history have New York stores dealing in fishing paraphernalia had the enormous sales of this summer. While regulars have been among the purchasers, the bulk of increased sales comes from new disciples of Izaac Walton. Lay-off actors who usually stood around Broadway curbs awaiting the breaks bought second-hand cars, filled them with rods and reels. And found they could live more cheaply and healthfully angling than anything they ever did.

The newspaper paragraphers of another era were Tories of the news rooms, distinct, aloof. They did not mingle. Elderly, expressing tarragon tastes, they had their bleak cubby holes with a broken-down desk, paste pot and shears. I know of only two still going—one a reader in a clipping bureau, the other a proofreader on a pulp western. They were fatalists who expected the inevitable, dismissal and genteel poverty. But they went over their horizons with a flourish. The old Morning Telegraph, a barney refuge for the journalistically forlorn, harbored a dozen white-haired paragraphers, putterers at petty tasks. In their opulence, they were deft in turning out three or four brightly minted lines with a Baconian dexterity smack at the dead line.

One of the most evanescent figures in the theater has been the shy George Kelly. He did not mix with the theatrical crowds, but, instead, from suburban Philadelphia turned out hit after hit such as "The Show Off." He would make no promise to producers, write as the spirit moved and spurned conferences. Then he evidently tired of it all and quit. Or playwrighting became too speculative.

Harold Ross is never completely at ease unless the offices of The New Yorker suggest a recent blow by a tornado. Always a new partition is going up or an old one coming down. The confusion is constant. James Thurber, coming in the other day and seeing fresh piles of disarray, tacked this sign on the bulletin board: "Alterations Going On as Usual During Business!"

EUROPE ON WAY TO RECOVERY

Cotton Advances Despite Decline In Consumption

MARKET VIEWS OF BROKERS

Paine, Webber & Co.—The guaranteed portion of the rally is now completed. Any further extension of the improvement of the past six days will depend upon whether there is to be an administration change of policy. Without such a change, it should not be long, in our opinion, before stocks try out the validity of the July 26 base.

G. M. P. Murphy & Co.—Probably the dominant influences on policies now should be the unfavorable action of the market since February, that is the refusal to make a new high followed by breaking of successive important points on the downside, and the fact that the rally in the industrials has recovered almost half of the preceding downswing and has carried prices to an area where the going probably will be difficult. Third quarter earnings prospects are a factor. Consequently traders might put accounts in condition in which they would have liked them when the market was declining last week.

E. A. Pierce & Co.—In the first hour yesterday the industrials resumed their slow advance and promise, we think, to extend the rally.

CREDIT FOUND CHEAPEST IN GENERATION

Money Goes Begging for Lack of Good Loan Risks

By M. S. RUKEYSER

New York, Aug. 3.—Money is going a-begging. Not within the memory of the present generation [illegible] has commercial credit been offered so cheaply. [illegible] industrial corporations [illegible] by money lenders to take loans for six [illegible] per cent.

The [illegible] man in a [illegible] bank today is one who can find good commercial loans.

[illegible] of security [illegible] represents an adjustment to the new status of regulated markets in which manipulation [illegible] was a form of merchandising [illegible] frowned upon.

With [illegible] outlawed, stocks may tend to sell more on a strict investment basis.

One important lender, who regards his company very much as though it was his personal property, said that he is not eager to [illegible] marked up on [illegible] that he does not intend to sell out and is primarily interested in the continuity of dividends. He pointed out that an inflated market price for his shares would merely mean that on [illegible] death his heirs would have to pay a higher inheritance tax.

[illegible] Cornish, chairman of the National Lead Company, told me that he is adverse to price fixing under the NRA.

He thinks that some NRA associations tend to create monopoly conditions.

He points out that smaller competitors in some industries have only been able to live through price cutting. Without price cutting, he [illegible] the available business would go to the leader, with superior good will and reputation.

If that happened Mr. Cornish fears that the beneficiary monopoly would be prosecuted under the Sherman act, after the temporary exemption under the NRA might be removed.

Hard headed business men of the old school are perplexed by the current situation which is buoyed up so much by government spending. They feel that government [illegible] is being substituted for the credit of commerce which depends on confidence.

The big job of the administration is to make its spending a net increment to total economic activity rather than a mere substitute for private spending and investment. To do that, Washington must hearten business leaders, and [illegible] their more active co-operation.

Business would be enormously cheered by an announcement that the period of experimentation is concluded and that no new burdens in the form of taxes or otherwise are contemplated until the nation is on some return to the pre-depression level. Such an announcement would start a psychological reflex of immense importance, and might well tend to put unemployed funds and idle men to work.

THE SCENE AT NARRAGANSETT'S race park, like a garden spot in the wilderness, might have been a bit of rural Florida's geographical skin grafted onto the Rhode Island landscape. The surrounding land with its scrub pines, mosquito swamps and witch grass is very like tropical Florida, where a stone's throw from pleasures and palaces, venemous reptiles, big as inner tubes, lurk amid the jungle and sinister things with teeth and claws crawl in the undergrowth

What Tom Yawkey's new Fenway Park, with its turrets and glazed runways, is to baseball, Narragansett is to racing architecture, making Rockingham, where the horse-loving gentry of New England guessed away nine millions of out-patients' money, look very shabby and like the exposition halls in a county fair

THE AIR OF SORDID commercialism, which is the underlying purpose of any race track, is nicely glossed over at Narragansett, with its cream stucco and country club awnings. It is likely to beguile you into having a week's spending in a few minutes

Here on the long approaches to the grandstand, topped with flags and fragrant with fresh paint, stands Captain James Wright, chief track detective, who has policed the moochers stooges and grifters away from race tracks for 30 years, yet has never seen a race

Trim, spectacled, neatly tailored and looking like a school master, Captain Wright stands by the gate and scans the crowd as it files through the sheepruns. Most of the race crooks, touts and sinister characters who haunt the tracks around the country he knows by sight and name

"There goes 'Sticky Jim,'" he says, pointing to a lean, seedy individual, who shuffles among the ladies in lawn and the form-fitted gentlemen. "Harmless enough."

Small Boys Are Masters, Oldsters Their Servants

THE JOCKEY ROOM, NEARBY the paddock, where betting customers may inspect the animals is alive with the little monkey-men and their valets. You have to be "right," fully indorsed, to get into the Salle de Jocks.

Eighteen valets, whites and Negroes—mostly men with lines of adversity engraved on their prematurely old features, shine the gear, mend the silks and dress the bantam men, who vary between cherubs with peach fuzz on their cheeks to hard bitten sour looking roosters with hard lights in their eyes A constant war against fat has taken its toll on the older riders

Bill Owen, himself a former jockey now gray, and thick through the withers, rules the jockey room with an iron hand The outgoing boys stand, like well behaved scholars, gawdy in colors, and with the saddle and tack on their arms, as he checks them off. It is a serious matter to dress a jock in the wrong silks. A "color man," like a theatrical wardrobe mistress, has charge of that.

ACROSS THE INFIELD, dry with powdery dust and never a spear of grass, lie the low, flat stables where sleek nags with bodkin bellies stretch their necks through the half-doors. Leg bandages hang from the eves, drying in the sun, halters, mash pans and gear range in orderly rows.

The trainers, men of all breeds and color, lounge before their stalls. Affable men as a rule, because no "mean man," they say, can successfully train running horses, sensitive as they are to human frauds. Exercise boys, lean shavers not yet in the apprentice, or "bug" stage, try hard to assume the jockey's swagger. Barn swipes talk to their animals as they work, the horses swivelling their ears and blinking as they listen.

THE THING WHICH BASEBALL men predicted earlier this year, i. e. that the uper-lively ball would produce many casualties when the July sun had baked the soil and the heat added another notch to the ball's life, is coming to pass.

Every few days, another major leaguer is being picked off by bullet drives, like that which knocked Hal Trosky, Cleveland first baseman, unconscious. Bill McKechnie was saying only lately that the miracle is that so few pitchers have been laid out by line drives.

"I've seen several that missed their heads by a whisker," says Bill, "and they didn't have time either to duck or throw up their hands."

At its recent midsummer meeting the National League secretly agreed to reduce the life of the ball, though not until the clubs have used up the surplus stock of the "Rabbit" kind. The Shibe ball factory in Philadelphia, where all the major league "apples" are made, is now making the less lively ball which will be inserted into the game, without public notice, sometime next month

Strictly for Simple Minds

EITHER THE WRESTLING lords who govern the affairs of the mat have a low estimate of public intelligence or these Londos-George championship renewals are the proverbial meeting of the irresistible force and the immovable object. Scientists say that such a meeting, if possible, would cause mutual destruction That has its advantage Londos and George, however, seem to go on forever, hardly scratching the body varnish.

BECAUSE OF HIS COLD, unemotional manner on the mound, the Giants call Huck Betts of the Braves, "Icewater." The Braves have beaten the Giants only four times in 15 games, and Huck has won three of these. He is a pitching type known as a "nibbler" who uses a deceptive, medium speed, which looks easy to hit but which is always off center and away from the fat of the bat.

Batsmen time their stride and swing, not so much by the flight of the ball as the movement of the pitcher's arm, which is why a "change of pace" which propels the ball at different speeds from the same arm movement, is particularly effective against toe-hold swingers like the Giants. Betts, getting along in years, has made up in cunning what he has lost in power. He has one of the best changes of pace in the game.

SOPWITH, WIFE DUE TO ARRIVE IN N. Y. TODAY

By International News Service

New York, Aug 3—Britain's successor to the late Sir Thomas Lipton, T. O. M. otherwise Thomas Octave Murdock Sopwith, arrives here today with his wife aboard the White Star liner Aquitania

Sopwith's trip here is inspired by the same great passion that dominated the life of the deceased tea merchant, namely, the lifting of the America's Cup [illegible] yachting supremacy.

Sopwith's yacht, Endeavour, is on its way across the Atlantic to prepare for the cup races against an American challenger, not yet selected, off Newport, R. I., this fall.

In spite of the fact that he was content to remain in the background for many years while Sir Thomas Lipton strove repeatedly to capture the America's cup, Sopwith is no stranger to international yachting circles.

As a matter of fact, it is conceded that he has a better chance of taking the ancient mug home with him than any other yachtsman Britain could send over here.

The Endeavour, which is being conveyed across the Atlantic by Sopwith's steam yacht, Vita, is expected to arrive at Bristol, R. I., within the next week.

It is altogether likely that instead of landing in New York, Sopwith and his wife may leave the Aquitania at Quarantine and proceed direct to the home of Commodore Junius Spencer Morgan at Glen Cove, L. I.

300 Yachts to Battle in 'Head Race Week

By E. B. Schriftgiesser

With all sail drawing, Massachusetts Bay racing fleets lay their courses today for Marblehead. There tomorrow afternoon the big cannon on the pier of the Eastern Yacht Club will boom to signify that another Race Week has arrived, and the climactic events of the local yachting season will be under way.

Although yachting, like other sports, suffered severely from the depression, the number of boats competing in Marblehead's annual midsummer series has never fallen off seriously.

In tonnage, it is true, the size of the racing fleet has dwindled a little, but racing skippers who could not afford to keep their large yachts in commission have merely shifted to smaller craft, and the starting list has always approached the 1929 record very closely

NEW MARKS EXPECTED

This year Marblehead confidently predicts a new record for the number of starters in some of the races. The increase will be in small boats, such as the Snipes of City Point or the tiny Yankee Clippers of Marblehead, but even these minute sailing craft indicate that racing is still at fever heat.

During the past week most racing craft between Quincy and Annisquam have been hauled out, their bottoms polished to a high racing gloss, and the sails and rigging thoroughly overhauled. This afternoon long lines of sailing yachts were to be seen under tow for the North Shore yachting capital. Tomorrow more are expected, and by Sunday the fleet should be completed with late arrivals after the local races of Saturday

Tomorrow's race, like those of Monday and Tuesday will be sailed under the colors of the socially exclusive Eastern Yacht Club. The winner of two of the three races will receive handsome prizes from the club.

Next Wednesday the Boston Yacht Club will take charge, offering elaborate awards for a single day of sailings. Then on Thursday the Corinthian Yacht Club colors will go to the masthead for the final three days of Race Week, the winners of this series to be decided upon a point system

300 STARTERS READY

Larger boats, following Marblehead's traditional system, will start from the line off Marblehead Rock, while smaller craft will employ the starting line just inside the harbor entrance near the Corinthian Yacht Club. At least 250 yachts are expected for tomorrow's [illegible], with the numbers gradually [illegible] till a peak of nearly 300 starters is reached late next week. This huge fleet far exceeds any in other American regattas, only the British yachting crowds of Cowes Week rivalling it.

James C. Gray is chairman of the Eastern Y. C. committee which controls the opening series. For the Boston Y. C., Herbert McInnis will be in charge and Frank Munro is chairman of the Corinthian Y. C. committee for the three closing events.

Boats of Class Q, probably 10 in number, will be largest in the racing fleet, which ranges in size down to the little Brutal Beasts which the children sail around the harbor each morning during race week. The Yankee Clippers are a new class of little 12-footers, built during the winter by North Shore Sea Scouts and raced by courtesy of Marblehead Yacht Clubs. Boston will be represented by its famous I and Indian classes and nearly 30 other yachting divisions are lined up for a solid week of competition

Sunday brings a series of races held by the Pleon Y. C. for the junior championship, and also an ocean race held by the Boston Y. C. for off shore cruising craft

'Big Train' Resting Comfortably

By Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug 3—Walter Johnson, the 'Big Train,' who manages the Cleveland Indians, was reported resting comfortably today by attendants at Lakeside Hospital, where he is under treatment for pleurisy

Dr. H. M Castle, team physician said Johnson appeared to be somewhat improved, but still was running a slight temperature As is common in pleurisy cases, he is in some pain.

The physician said pneumonia, which at first was feared, has not set in. He was unable to indicate how long Johnson might be in the hospital, except to say that in similar cases patients have been confined for two weeks or more.

Big Williams 'Cap at 'Gansett Park Draws Ace Field

By Dave Egan

Narragansett Park, R. I., Aug 3. The turmoil at a race track never seems to die down, for those with a lust for improving the breed and wagering on the side never seem to lose that lust.

Now all eyes are directed to the morrow, as we say in the [illegible] when the Roger Williams Handicap for a purse of [illegible] added, will be held as the feature of tomorrow's card of racing.

There will be racing today, of course, with seven miseries (that's what we losers call races) on the program, but the big event is scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, rain or shine, when some of the greatest hosses in this or any other land will go to the post in the Roger Williams Handicap.

INDIAN RUNNER CHOICE

Indian Runner, one of the greatest four-year-olds in the sport, will be the favorite. George D. Ogden's Beastie won the Stars and Stripes Handicap at Arlington Park two years [illegible] which is something about which he could whinny and boast if he felt so inclined. He [illegible] have to shoulder the heavy burden of 126 pounds [illegible]

On top of that he is being shipped over from Saratoga [illegible] trip. But he is [illegible] a great four-year-old and they regard him [illegible] that he will pack the top weight.

Indian Runner is one of [illegible] nominations that Racing Secretary Jack Campbell has received. A. G. Vanderbilt's three-year-old, the Gene Venzke of the horse racing world has also been entered. He is second only to Cavalcade among the three-year-olds and it's one of the whimsies of fate that two such great animals should [illegible] the same time.

BARNSWALLOW READY

[illegible] Barnswallow, one of the best of the fillies in the business, Calumet Farm's [illegible] Sister and Black Buddy are among the hosses in the 116 pounds class.

[illegible] your old Rockingham friend Teralice. Percy A. Pike's hoss, Chinese [illegible] won the stake event [illegible] Teralice [illegible]

Teralice has shown splendid form in her New England appearance. She won three straight at Rockingham, and won them so decisively that Trainer Harry Unna turned down an offer of $30,000 for the thoroughbred

Howard "Hank" Hughes was the hero of yesterday's meeting The 17-year-old little fellow brought in three winners in quick succession—Flying Don in the second, Wax in the third, and Par Value in the fourth

The mutuel handle yesterday was $220,809, which is a lot of "tak" at any track, and predictions are being freely made that this track will be one of the richest in the country before the season is over

'RABBIT' PLANS TO PLAY AGAIN

A young old man of 42 Walter Rabbit Maranville, who signs himself "As ever, faithfully yours proves his point today long before he gets to the conclusion of a letter just received by Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves

It's dated [illegible] and says

"My Dear Judge.

"I went to the hospital last Monday afternoon and was operated on at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon for the fourth time had the plate taken out and the leg put back in a cast. I must let that remain two weeks to give the leg time to heal It will then be another case of massaging

"While I went through a great deal, even against your advice I now feel fine again and while I appreciate that you did not want me to go through this thing again and be satisfied instead with remaining on the coaching line, you will be surprised when I come back to the club.

"The young fellows of today will have to be a lot smarter and better to beat me out of my job at second base, the 'old man's home.' If this leg of mine comes through as promised by the doctors I will be making the young fellows look foolish until I am 50

"Mrs. Maranville joins me in sending our love to Mrs. Fuchs and yourself. As ever, faithfully yours, RABBIT"

The Rabbit broke his leg in a spring training exhibition with the Yankees in St. Petersburg, Fla. this spring

Silent Otto and Jimmy Wilson Come to Blows

International News Service

New York, Aug. 3—Casey Stengel, sage of Flatbush, is an observant old bird and a talkative one. Casey can and will talk, with or without provocation, but unlike most baseball orators, he always has something interesting to say whether he's trying to convince his Dodgers that stealing second with the bases loaded [illegible]

ATTENDANCE GOOD

"Yes, sir, this is the first year I ever see where the doormats of the league didn't curl up after Independence Day. And the fans sure do appreciate a ball club that shows some fight. That's why the baseball attendance has been so good.

"Even the Reds put up a battle when they're getting murdered. And you'd think a pennant was riding on every game those Phillies play. And look at my dizzy Dodgers.

"What's that? Now, no wisecracks. I know it ain't compulsory to look at 'em. But at that, they're showing something. Why, even old Otto Miller, who ain't said a cross word to anybody in 25 years, got himself so steamed up yesterday that Jimmy Wilson had to bounce a couple rights off his whiskers."

Casey chuckled. "Ain't that rich; guess Jimmy was sore because we knocked his Phillies loose from sixth place. I don't know which gave the fans the bigger kick—Lopez's homer in the ninth or Wilson's right hook to Otto's jaw. Anyhow, we'll pack 'em in next time we meet, and maybe the front office will give old Otto a bonus for taking a couple on the whiskers."

Lou Gehrig had a large day with a single, two doubles and his 33d homer in four times up. Young Eldon Auker held the Indians to four hits and the Tigers won, 3 to 0.

LITTLE DINAH IN 4TH WILSON'S BEST AT 'GANSETT PARK

CONCEDED PUTT COSTS PAIR GOLF MATCH

By Bill Grimes

Somebody pulled one for the well known book at Essex yesterday when Mrs. F. M. Abbott was allowed to concede herself a putt for a halve on the 11th green, during the semi-final round of the women's four-ball invitation. As a result of the ruling which allowed the concession, the match went into extra holes and, of course, the victims of the concession, Mrs. C. T. Porter and Mrs. R. C. Cushman, were the losers.

Although he has been rated for years as one of the top notch amateurs in this section, C. C. Clare of Race Brook had never been able to crash through outside a Connecticut state event until he won the New England's yesterday at Waterbury. And despite the fact that he won by a 7 and 6 margin, Clare suffered plenty of mental hazards and physical torture while disposing of Charlie Roland, an Essex invader from Rhode Island.

With all due respect to the other contenders for the New England title, and Clare in particular, it was a break for the field that Frank Ross did not qualify. Ross has few peers as a match player and one look from him would have been enough to put the Indian sign on players who went through two and three rounds.

It was no time to ask Gene Sarazen for his autograph after he had trailed 14 strokes behind Leo Diegel during the first round of the Canadian open championship. Diegel was five under par for a 67 and Sarazen 19 over.

The Cape Cod Caddy League, recently formed under the direction of George R. Faxon, is booming along in great style. Woods Hole, Hyannis Port, Oyster Harbors, Wianno and Eastward Ho are represented by five-man teams which are playing for a beautiful trophy donated by members. The league is in action every Thursday and has created considerable interest among both the caddies and the members.

Burt Nicol, the Belmont Spring professional, admits that he will never shoot such a perfect round of golf as he did recently while carding a 67. With the exception of a pushed drive at the 15th, Burt played faultlessly.

I guess that Doctors Eddie O'Brien and Joe Shorted are just Commonwealth golfers. Between them, they used up in the neighborhood of 250 strokes to get around South Shore during the St. Margaret's Hospital medical staff tournament.

FRED ALMY FIT FOR VICTORY BID IN 1ST

out she placed to Fake at five furlongs. In a previous outing Bill Irvin's charge raced five and one-half furlongs in 1:06 3-5 over a fast track to grab Westy's Duke, Prosecutor and six others.

FRED ALMY, PLAYING ON, INSTIGATOR

I have a hunch that FRED ALMY will stand a world of beating in this affair. His recent races have only been fair, but earlier in the Salem meeting the Jack Hare, Jr., colt could handle this field with ease. PLAYING ON won his only start over this course from a fairly strong field and looms as the main danger. INSTIGATOR raced well on New York tracks before shipping to this point.

BROWN WISDOM, HASTY PETER, JAZZ AGE

BROWN WISDOM was scratched out of today's second race to await this spot. The son of Brown Prince appears to be well placed and should experience little difficulty in winning. He is in great shape, having won his last start at Rockingham Park with ease. HASTY PETER is reported to have shipped well and looms as the main danger. JAZZ AGE may hang on long enough to share the minor award.

KNIGHT OF OLD, STAROGAN, TELL WHY

If morning trials may be taken as a true criterion, then KNIGHT OF OLD should never leave this issue in doubt. The Max Smart-trained thoroughbred burned up the Rockingham Park track in his morning trials. He stepped six furlongs on two separate occasions in 1:14 and was timed a mile in 1:42 on July 2. That sort of running should never leave the issue in doubt. STAROGAN, who displayed a high turn of early foot in her lone start at Rockingham, may hang on long enough to save the place from TELL WHY. The latter was only beaten a nose and a neck in his last at Empire City with $1200 top and bottom platers.

LITTLE DINAH, JESSIE D. M., MADDENING

If anything upsets my dope and dumps LITTLE DINAH, it will likely be JESSIE D. M. The latter raced with the best that could be mustered at Rockingham and had only scant chance to show her true worth. MADDENING'S recent races at Empire City weren't so hot but her spring races in Maryland were excellent. Mayhap, she didn't fancy the footing at Empire.

RHADAMANTUS, ZEKIEL, SPEEDY SKIPPY

RHADAMANTUS is a highly regarded colt in the C. V. Whitney barn. He raced well enough at Pimlico and Arlington Park to be given the call here. Last out at Arlington, he drubbed a similar field to this. ZEKIEL was in front of High Line and Black Hand for a little over a half mile last out. Against this sort he should hang on long enough to shut SPEEDY SKIPPY out of place. The latter trimmed a shifty field over a distance of ground last out.

VESTED POWER, OLD JUDGE, RHODIUS

VESTED POWER is dropping down so far that he should never come out of a pull. The son of Vespasian was racing in much better company at Rockingham. OLD JUDGE, who was barely beaten a lip in his last outing, figures to offer the sternest contention. RHODIUS, an honest old fellow, should share in the spoils.

LAWLESS LADY, GRACIAS, BOY CRAZY

LAWLESS LADY raced as though she may have disliked the footing at Rockingham Park and I am going to give her one more chance. When right she is capable of handling this cheap lot. GRACIAS finished second in his last outing at Empire City, but there wasn't much in behind him. BOY CRAZY looks as good as anything else for the minor award.

Doc Parshall Drives Morley Prince Against Ace Field in 2:13 Trot at Salem

By Ed Cogswell

Rockingham Park, Salem, N. H., Aug. 3—There is an excellent card of eight races for this afternoon, the third day of the Grand Circuit meeting. The 2:13 trot holds the most interest. Thirteen are down to take the word, and racing luck is quite likely to give any one of the field the honors, so evenly are they matched.

Because of his victory Wednesday the most money will naturally be placed on Morley Prince. He has that sterling and most successful driver behind him, Doc Parshall, and a whole lot of form players believe in trailing along with a winning stable and driver.

Sir Raleigh, owned by Allan J. Wilson, has shown very fast in his work this year. Prince Hal must prove a factor. The friends of Paul Bowser will be out strong to back his entry, Hollyrood Boris, not forgetting the killing he made with Tara.

Aunt Ida looks the class for the first event, though there is an undercurrent that Parshall is going to cut a melon with Captain Jack. It will be well to watch the odds displayed to see how the money on Jack is going into the pari mutuel windows.

Tommy Berry should ride home first in the second class with Belvedere. Silver King appears the second best of the party of 2-year-old trotters. This event will be decided best two heats in three, and is valued at $2789.73.

The eighth race will display a number of locally-owned three-year-olds. There is Lady Wayne, from the Bowser's Lexington stable; Frolic, owned by George Graves, and Cadmet Edith Frost, recently gained a record of 2:1[illegible] over a half-mile track and last year was a consistent winner in the two-year-old events.

The tip must have gotten out in Lawrence that former Mayor William P. White was going to start Tidemark, the way that they flocked to the track. The big play on Hollyrood Reina set the odds up against Tidemark, so the neighbors of the former mayor returned home happy after collecting $11.80 for each $2 they bet to win, and $5 for the show money.

Last Year Pete Chappelle came down from Maine and turned the boys over in the Grand Circuit meeting at Rockingham Park with Rhinewortha. That the talent does not forget these things was attested yesterday when he once more made his appearance with the same Rhinewortha. When the returns were in and the odds posted the horse paid [illegible] $2.0 $3.40 and $[illegible]

Lucre proved a very fine name for the winner of the second race. He is the property of E. Roland Harriman, of Goshen, N. Y., and New York City. The gang backed Guardsman and Athlones Sally Boy, only to have Lucre pick up more of the stuff for his owner, and at the wholesome price of $34.30, $21 and $8.70.

It is something unusual for a Grand Circuit meeting to find a race when all of the customers want to bet on the chances of one horse only. This happened in the pacing event for three-year-olds. It was soon found by the pari-mutual attendants that all of the cash thrust their way was on Laure Hanover. Rather than to hold money for nothing, they decided to order no betting on this race.

W. H. Bird, of Revere, started his Allie Watts McKinney in the event won by Cobelle, finishing a neat third. Of course, this is not so satisfying as landing on top of the heap, but Bird felt pleased that his entry made so good a showing.

Herman Toothacker, of Somerville, has owned some right good horses in his day and he believes that in June Voo he has a pacing filly that will be heard from in time to come. In her race she rehearsed like an old-timer at the game, getting the show position to Dunmar. Some of her own friends backed her for third, and were in line to cash their tickets at $5.70.

LET'S CONSIDER WHAT'S UNDER THE WRAPPER

When more men ask for PHILLIES—and insist on PHILLIES—than any other cigar . . there must be reasons. And there are!! The most important is—HAVANA tobacco.

PHILLIES—at 5c—is guaranteed to contain exactly the same quantity of ripe, mellow, long-filler Havana—blended with the finest domestic tobacco grown—as when it was the leading 10c brand in America.

No cigar—without fine Havana—can give you the limit of pleasure you should get from your smoke. Ask your dealer. He knows tobacco—and he knows what Havana means in a cigar.

Try PHILLIES—in fairness to yourself. Look for the box with the blue strip on the lid containing Bayuk's Guarantee.

Bayuk's Guarantee

In 1929—a peak sales year—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (Familiarly known as "Philadelphia Handmade") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bayuk guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Domestic and Havana long-filler. It's the same identical cigar.

MYRNA LOY, WILLIAM POWELL LEAD CAST -:- FILMS ON THREE SCREENS REVIEWED

M-G-M to Bring Van Druten's Comedy, "There's Always Juliet," to Screen

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Aug. 3—Maybe it's Myrna Loy and William Powell year on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lot. Hunt Stromberg, who produced "The Thin Man," Woody Van Dyke, who directed it, and the Hacketts, who wrote the adaption, will unite in giving the world "There's Always Juliet," the John Van Druten play.

Louella O. Parsons

Hunt said today that he considers this an excellent follow-up for Loy and Powell after "The Thin Man." True, they will be together in "Evelyn Prentice" as husband and wife but that is a heavy melodrama and "There's Always Juliet," as the world knows, is light comedy drama with a chance for some grand dialogue.

* * *

Whatever is said for or against Jack Oakie we are all agreed he is a good actor. If he is naughty sometimes he is so repentant the next day that anyone forgives him. Jack has been in pretty bad with Paramount since his escapade in the San Bernardino jail. He didn't know until today whether or not he'd be taken back into the family so he is happy over the new contract given him on his promise not to do any more foolish stunts. After "College Rhythm" with Lanny Ross and Joe Penner, Jack will branch out as the star of "Win or Lose" with Martha Mansfield, called "the female Bing Crosby," billed as his leading lady.

Just heard today that Jack Conway has not given up the idea of making "Repeal" even though Jean Harlow could not see it as a starring vehicle for herself. He will put Gladys George into the Harlow role and Preston Foster into the male lead with Leo Carrillo as the featured player. Gladys George comes here from New York and she is described as a young Marjorie Rambeau with that something which is bound to make her a valuable addition to the screen.

A Line or Two

I am told that Julius Tannen's boy is a comer and that he is a combination of Fredric March and John Barrymore. He has been signed up for the part of a ham actor in "Biography of a Bachelor." Edward Everett Horton has also checked in for a comedy role in the same picture. Nedda Harrigan, of the famous Harrigan stage family, makes her screen debut in "I'll Fix It," opposite Jack Holt. In private life you must call her Mrs. Walter Connolly. The best customers of the airplane lines these days are the film actors who rush back to take a job on a minute's notice. O. P. Heggie, chosen to play Matthew in "Anne of Green Gables," is getting here today from New York via the ozone. Frank Lawton, whose contract with Universal permits him to do outside acting, has had his option exercised. After "David Copperfield" he will go back to the Laemmles for a picture or two. If you want to do a good deed buy a ticket from Mrs. Eddie Cantor for an informal dinner dance which will be held at the Hillcrest Country Club August 11. Its all for sweet charity.

Wonderland's Alice Turns to Films

By ANN AMES

"Alice in Wonderland" has turned out to be "Alice in Movieland." Through the Hollywood looking glass just recently stepped Josephine Hutchinson, who proved such a delightful replica in her Teniel costume of the Lewis Carroll heroine in Eva Le Gallienne's company last season. Now Josephine is learning all about what it takes to be a star in the pictures.

It won't be difficult, for she's been learning the rudiments and rules of acting ever since her baby days. Her mother is Leona Roberts, who appeared as the Red Queen in "Alice," and as the Nurse in "Romeo and Juliet" with Miss Le Gallienne. Miss Roberts is a really great actress. In fact she so successfully submerges her own unostentatious personality for the benefit of the character she creates, that her most ardent admirers are quite justified in believing that she's never been fully appreciated by a public that has become accustomed to having its stars exploited more vigorously. But don't let anybody tell you a few years hence that Leona Roberts is only Josephine Hutchinson's mother. In the order of their importance the facts are that Josephine is Leona Roberts' daughter first, and Hollywood's newest discovery afterwards.

Those interesting art exhibits George Kraska shows in the lobby and on the stair walls of the Fine Arts theater attract considerable comment and sometimes customers. Last month a group of works by Joseph Valardo, a young lad from East Boston, was on display. Joe loves to paint. Once when funds were low, a state most struggling young artists find chronic, he wanted to make a picture so much that he got out the scissors and snipped thousands of tiny bits of bright colored paper. Then he made some paste, and putting everything together, fashioned an exquisite little marine view that looks for all the world like an oil done with the finest type of brush.

Joe's an usher at the Fine Arts now. He walks to work, from East Boston, every morning. Dimes make dollars, and dollars buy paint.

Cantor at Tremont

Eddie Cantor in his last release, "Whoopee," is starred on the screen at the Tremont today, in a double feature program that runs through Sunday. The companion picture is "Pilgrimage," with Henrietta Crossman and Norman Foster in the leading roles, and as an added attraction the screen's newest and youngest idol, Shirley Temple, will be shown in "Polly Tix in Washington."

A special feature of the Saturday morning and Sunday afternoon programs will be another exciting chapter in "Young Eagles," Boy Scout animal adventures.

Leslie Howard Wins Despite Disguises

By JOYCE DANA

Between his various disguises, much of the Leslie Howard charm emerges on the screen at the Keith Boston, where "The Lady is Willing" opened yesterday.

Leslie Howard

A gay and nonsensical plot tells of a lesser Stavisky, who swindles millions by selling fake bonds in the same easy manner with which he provides the lady of his heart with diamond bracelets. The scoundrel has even stolen the considerable private fortune of his lovely wife, who unhappily and unbelievably has no defender until Leslie Howard turns up as a detective, an occupation which allows him to masquerade as a window-washer, a bearded doctor and an army officer.

As Captain Latour, he is sworn to avenge himself for some assorted holders of the bogus bonds, and in an intricate and implausible series of complications, he finally wins the million dollar wife and her inexhaustible bankroll. The title is derived, of course, from the fact that the lady is a willing victim of her romantically inclined kidnaper, which is not to be wondered at since her unappreciative husband had taken his love and her money elsewhere.

The story is by Guy Bolton, out of P. G. Wodehouse, we should hazard a guess, which allows for a lot of hilarious inanities and comical antics. Leslie Howard makes the most of rather scanty opportunities to be his charming, sophisticated self, and clowning capers do not become him. Binnie Barnes is an extremely pretty Mme Dupont, and Cedric Hardwicke her thoroughly disagreeable husband.

On the same program is "Monte Carlo Nights," a mystery thriller all about mistaken identities from an Oppenheim murder story. Mary Brian and John Darrow are the principals in the exciting drama, which leads everybody to the roulette tables at Monte Carlo, where through a clever system of numerals, the suspected hero captures the real criminal.

Bowdoin Program

Today and tomorrow at the Bowdoin Square Ann Harding appears on the screen in her latest starring vehicle, "The Life of Vergie Winters." John Boles plays opposite Miss Harding in the dramatic story. The co-feature is "Smarty," with Joan Blondell, Warren William and Frank McHugh.

Make to Order for Charlie Ruggles

By HARRIS MORGAN

There is no more engaging inebriate on the screen than Charlie Ruggles, who has even more comic escapades and more fun than usual in "Friends of Mr. Sweeney," which opened at the Paramount and Fenway theaters yesterday.

Except for a distressing and uncalled for bit of custard pie comedy tagged on at the end of the story, Ruggles is consistently amusing as Asaph of the popular Elmer Davis story. From an inarticulate and mousey little fellow who plods along on the editorial desk of a political magazine, browbeaten by his pompous boss and oblivious to the charms of his pretty secretary, Asaph is transformed overnight into a rip-roaring cave-man.

When his old college pal, Rixey, comes to town, Asaph flings inhibitions and caution to the winds, and with his adoring secretary and her blonde girl friend as partners, the two old friends start out on one of those All-American reunions that are apt to lead almost anywhere.

Gathering courage along with cocktails, Asaph's party gains admittance to an exclusive gambling club by posing as friends of a mythical Mr. Sweeney. With complete nonchalance the erstwhile timid soul gambles for staggering stakes, drinks Rixey under the table, and decides in a burst of bravado to go back to his office and record editorially and emphatically just what he thinks of one Prime, a dishonest candidate for the office of Governor.

Once at the Federal Building things happen fast and furiously. The boss is being blackmailed, armed gangsters are loading bolts of silk on a stone truck. Asaph turns gunman and then turns the tables neatly on both the boss and the burglars.

Ann Dvorak is the secretary who has discovered the heart of gold beneath the pallid personality of her employer, and Eugene Pallette, the boisterous and breezy fellow alumnus who leads Asaph astray.

Happy Claire

Claire Trevor, above, as she appears in "Baby Take a Bow" which is on the current bill at the Uptown.

All Film Stars Together on One Screen

Three generations of stars make "Film Parade" at the Fine Arts Theatre one of the most unusual pictures the screen has offered. J. Stuart Blackton has produced this saga of the movies, and every personage of any importance from the old Biograph days up to the present appears in the production.

Anna Sten

They number more than 150, and among them are Clara Kimball Young, Sidney Drew, Milton Sills, Viola Dana, Tom Mix, Rudolph Valentino, Barbara Le Marr, Mabel Norman, the Gish sisters under the Griffith banner, Maurice Costello, John Bunny, Flora Finch, the Talmadge girls, and more.

In an exceptionally interesting prologue, Blackton traces the history of moving pictures back five thousand years.

As another feature on the double bill, there is a return showing of Anna Sten in "The Brothers Karamazov," the screen version of the famous Russian classic, and the picture which first brought Miss Sten to the attention of American film producers.

RADIO TABLOID VERSION OF MOVIES ON TONIGHT

New and Novel Hollywood Plan

By N. F. T.

That weekly "California Melodies" period (WNAC) as of 9 o'clock this evening, makes ready to re-produce in sound, as nearly as possible, some outstanding film successes, past and present. These screen settings must of course, be boiled down to brief presentations and the first will be "The Love Parade" of a year or two back, where in Maurice Chevalier scored so sharply.

Norman Thomas, the fiery Socialist champion, has some spirited remarks to make by radio tonight (WAAB) at 10:45, speaking to a coast to coast air audience from New York.

PRESIDENTIAL PROGRAM

Ceremonies attending the arrival of President Roosevelt back to the mainland after his Pacific vacation cruise, comes across the continent this afternoon (WNAC and WBZ) from Portland, Ore. There's a half hour set aside from 4 until 4:30 p. m.

When the concert featuring Countess Olga Albani takes the 8 o'clock (WEEI) turn this evening as usual, the Countess extracts a leaf from the book of Helen Morgan by singing "My Bill" as warbled by la' Morgan for her outstanding "Showboat" stage solo. Then, too, there's the "Rosary" and "Siboney" for additional selections to be interpreted by the Countess.

SOLUTION SEEKING

Domestic difficulties for loud-speaker patrons in happy homes to consider and pass judgment upon, occupy the "Court of Relations" dramatic doings tonight (WNAC) during the 8:30 to 9 o'clock 30 minutes. All of which is being wafted with the title "Under Cover of Marriage" attached.

Followers of the "First Nighter" network offering (WEEI) on Fridays at 10 P. M., are promised "Dead Timber" for diversion, a theme dealing with situations that reach a climax against a background of roaring forest fire sound effects. Don't think the crackling is static, it will merely be the NBC sound technicians hard at it earning their stipend.

VISITING VIVACITY

Among the 14 microphone "Cinderellas" coming to Boston on Monday for the zone No. 2 "Hollywood Hotel" audition finals, there are included a quintet of ambitious gals from five New York State cities, namely; Buffalo, Syracuse, Albany, Utica and Rochester. One arrives from Erie, Pa., two from Connecticut, Hartford and Bridgeport; a lass from Maine, meaning Bangor and one from Providence in Rhode Island. Springfield and Worcester are the outside Bay State communities. Last but not least, Alice O'Leary is ready and waiting to represent Boston against them all.

Biddeford Bans Shorts

Biddeford, Me., Aug. 3—Beauty, parading Biddeford streets in "shorts," was reminded that nudity begins somewhere about the knee, when an order banning such brief garments was promulgated by Chief of Police Oscar Parent.

You Hear Him on the Radio

Arthur Bagley . . . The only newspaperman in the world who can get up . . . Consistently . . . At 5:30 a. m. . . . And never be late . . . And who is so healthy that it hurts . . . And who wants everybody else to be healthy . . . No matter how much it hurts . . . Or how early they have to get up.

The dean of American broadcasting . . . With never a miss on a week day since 1925 . . . When he started the Tower Health morning drills . . . And since that time so much has come to pass . . . While Bagley goes on . . . And includes a laugh touch by kidding Bill Mahoney . . . The pianist . . . Who also goes to the studio with the lark.

ARTHUR BAGLEY

Bagley was selected for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. health exercises for one reason . . . Because he had made a big name for himself as a physical culturist . . . And as an army physical instructor . . . During the war . . . Serving in this capacity at the Rockingham (N. H.) camp . . . And at Camp Greene in North Caroina.

The riddle of Arthur's unfailing appearance at the studio at such an ungodly hour in the morning he has solved himself . . . By explaining that first he receives a telephone call . . . From a hotel . . . Near East 28th street . . . Where he and his family maintain an apartment . . . And that he also has a series of alarm clocks . . . Which jangle every five minutes . . . In the event that he ignores the hotel . . . Which incidentally hasn't occurred yet.

Bagley is a native of New Jersey . . . And he had a career as newspaper reporter . . . And later as salesman . . . Before entering the physical culture field . . . to spend 23 years with the Y. M. C. A. . . . As physical instructor.

A home man . . . With his daughter married . . . And his son's friends his . . . At the New York apartment . . . Where the hobbies are cards, conversation and music . . . And Bill Mahoney . . . And where the Bagleys and Mahoney trek off to bed early . . . By 10:30 at the latest . . . And fancy that in a newspaperman!

Tomorrow's Radio Personality Portrait will be that of Robert Simmons, the preacher's boy from Fairplay.

You can see Barbara Holmes daily from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. at the new free rental bureau on the fourth floor of the R. H. White Co.

Fair's Dancers Wear Pants

By Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 3—Fan dancers wore pants again today at the World's Fair.

Declaring "the lid is not off," police squads raided five villages and "The Bowery," seizing gambling wheels in each place, closed an exhibition and on their way out ordered pants placed on Faith Bacon, fan dancer.

Officials said they would not permit abuses of their new liberalized policy, adopted at the insistence of disgruntled concessionaires.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

FRIDAY, AUGUST 3, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION
BY MORE THAN 80,000

Liquor to Children

"KILL the goose that lays the golden egg" seems to be the first rule of many liquor sellers. Certainly, they did more than any other class to bring about the outlawing of their business by prohibition.

And now some of them seem once more engaged on a course that can only arouse public indignation and result in a new threat of banishment for their trade.

Complaint after complaint has reached the Licensing Board that certain cafe owners with a "get-rich-quick" complex are selling intoxicants to children not yet out of high school. No one voiced this more dramatically than Father Joseph Breslin of Roxbury's Mission Church.

He told the Board graphically how he and other priests of the parish had seen young girls—shamefully drunk— staggering into automobiles with young boys who should have been in bed hours earlier.

Some liquor men are inclined to shrug their shoulders. A sale is a sale, they say. Let the parents look after the youngsters if they don't want them to drink.

Such an attitude is penny wise and pound foolish. A cafe dance band and dimmed lights may lure a few extra quarters into the cash register, but, if those quarters come from children, they will eventually cause cobwebs to cover those same registers.

The Licensing Board has already indicated that it will grant no new permits until there has been a good deal of house cleaning. This ought to be sufficient warning. We don't believe in prohibition, but rapacious dealers must not be allowed to make topers of our children.

Dog Poisoners

Some persons simply are not fit to live in a civilized community. And yet, in the eyes of the law, they are not very serious criminals. We refer especially to dog poisoners.

We don't expect everybody to like a dog and to have one for a pet. But we do expect everyone to like a child. And the person who poisons a child's pet dog hurts the child more than he does the animal.

He undermines that child's faith in human nature. He lays the foundations for suspicion and hate.

If these poisoners are so high strung that they cannot bear to hear a dog bark now and then, they should shut themselves away in some secluded retreat. All the other noises of city life must drive them to frenzy.

We would not miss them—nor would the people of Braintree, scene of recent dog poisonings. They would be glad enough to hear barking dogs and laughing children and no complaining, cowardly, poisoning cranks.

Vacation for a Museum

Even museums, it would seem, need a vacation once a year. Just now the Isabella Stewart Gardner art museum, in the Fenway, is closed. It will be open again to the public—after it has been cleaned and refurbished—on September 1.

And that leads us to wonder just how many Bostonians have been in the place or in the more famous Boston Museum of Fine Arts. They say no native Detroiter has ever gone through the Ford plant; no Chicagoan through the Stock Yards.

Do Bostonians also neglect the things that make their city famous the world over? If they have not been to these museums—if they do not visit them often, it is too bad.

They have missed something. Like fine music, a fine picture is good for the soul. Try it some time.

A Coolidge Shrine?

Sic transit gloria mundi! That's Latin. And if we have not forgotten everything they tried so hard to teach us in college, it means: "So passes the world and the glory thereof!"

The phrase came to mind when we learned that you can rent a Northampton flat, the one that Calvin Coolidge moved to from the White House, for a mere $40 a month.

Sunday motorists who ask the traffic policeman to direct them to the place find it rather forlorn with its vacant windows and knee-high grass.

Yet some day it will be an historic shrine with a bronze tablet—if the wind and weather are not swifter than the directors of historical societies.

Actor's Story Sad

Some years ago the late Hal Skelly made a great hit in a talkie about a vaudeville dancer who got his name in lights on Broadway and then slipped back into tragic oblivion because he couldn't leave booze alone.

The story of Billy Montgomery is even more tragic, and it's true.

You don't have to be much older than forty to remember Billy with his partner and wife, Florence Moore, stopping the show at vaudeville houses some twenty years ago.

He was a great success. He made a mint of money, lived at the best hotels, spent heavily, gambled like a fool. The pace was too fast. Billy became a narcotic addict.

The other day Billy's body—the body of a broken-down old man—was found in a vacant lot in Paterson, New Jersey.

You may be able to cheat and get away with it at any game—though that's pretty doubtful in the long run—but you never can get away with cheating your own body.

International Navy Yard

Officially, it's the United States Navy Yard at Charlestown. But actually it begins to seem as though it were an international institution.

Beside being visited by four of our own super-dreadnaughts, the Yard has extended its hospitality to British, French, German and Italian ships in the last few months. And now the Swedish training ship "Af Chapman" is here.

Her officers and men are assured of the same hearty welcome that was extended to the other visiting sailors. And Bostonians are eagerly awaiting the opportunity to inspect her.

Going to the Navy Yard begins to be almost as educational as travel. Children, especially, learn much of the customs of other lands from their sailors.

Somerville Grows!

Congratulations, Somerville! The ERA census takers report that there were 2899 more residents in this suburb on January 1 than there were when the 1930 federal census was completed. This gives Somerville a population of 106,807—and still growing. Must be because people like to live there!

'To Let' Problems

By Winifred Black

"To let or lease—one five-room furnished house, bath, patio, swimming pool, sleeping porch, large garden—valley view."

How interesting they are, the "to lets and to leases" — now there's the one in the next column:

Winifred Black

Gentleman's country residence, five rooms, four baths, living room, breakfast room, dining room, three servants' rooms, garage for four cars — ocean view, fully furnished — references required."

Which do you choose?

Four baths, five master rooms. How nice and roomy, but what shape are the rooms? Are they big and spacious and leisurely looking? How about the porches? —what's a summer home without a porch or a patio or something?

Five master bedrooms—no, I don't want it—too much room for guests and not enough room to get away from them.

If Aunt Sue ever heard about that house and me in it, she'd be there with her twin poodles and her astrology books before I had the fresh curtains up in the bathroom, and she'd stay all summer, too—leave it to her. And all the sweethearts who came to visit would have to dodge Aunt Sue morning, noon and night—always prowling through the halls when she ought to be asleep or "taking a breath" in the seat by the fountain in the moonlight, where no one but sweethearts should ever sit at all—in the moonlight anyhow.

Poor Aunt Sue, she is so hungry to be "in things." I'm afraid that's the reason she's always out of them.

No, I don't care for Aunt Susan this summer, thank you. And there are the two Giggly girls! Let them have a hint of that house and all the room in it and we'd be in for a visitation.

The Giggly girls and their friends with the radio on all day and most of the night, and they tearing in and out of the house in bathing suits, and in golf clothes and in riding togs and giggling every minute about nothing.

The five-roomer with the patio for me, thanks—valley view and all and I can read all the silly novels I can find and hear the robins whispering together at twilight and listen to the blue jays yelling the gossip of the country from tree to tree.

It's a terrible test of friendship to live in the house all summer with the very nicest person you ever knew.

Oh, yes, I always read the "to let and to lease" ads, they are so stimulating to the imagination.

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

When a man comes bravely forward and admits that he was mistaken, somebody ought to hoist a flag and give three rousing cheers — as any married woman will assure you.

Helen Rowland

So, here's a bouquet for that eminent college professor who confesses that he was wrong when he advised his students, five years ago, to "marry the Boss' daughter." He now sadly agrees that the Boss' stenographer would be a much better bet as a wife.

Looking at marriage from the Gold Standard, he's right. And yet, if I were a man, I don't know whether I'd rather be a rich girl's "pet" or a business-girl's sparring partner. There is no club that a woman can shake in a man's face more painful and effective than a nice, plump salary check.

Don't get me wrong. Marriage is an economic proposition; and many a gloriously happy young couple hold down separate jobs and pool their resources. It is as easy to love a girl with a good pay-envelope as to love the other kind; and many a pair of happy young things would never have been able to marry, if the girl had not insisted on taking a job.

But when marriage becomes a get-rich-easy scheme it is always a flop. As a "racket" it is poor pickings and a long-term sentence. The woman who marries for money, regardless of what she has to take along with it, has a deadly enough life. But the man who marries a woman in order to get an easy berth condemns himself to a far worse fate.

Women of the old school sometimes married for a meal-ticket, and men often married in order to get a housekeeper. But in these enlightened days, when every woman can make a living if she chooses and every man can set up a bachelor flat and make a "home" for himself, marrying for material or mercenary reasons or for anything except LOVE, seems like exchanging a world tour for a trip to Coney Island.

In short, sad as it may seem to the cynics, there is nothing left to marry for EXCEPT love. Love and companionship and adventure. Blacksmithing and the livery stable business are not the only businesses that are completely out of the picture. Marriage, as a business proposition, is rapidly joining high-button shoes and horse-hair sofas.

Unless a girl is the one who can make a man's heart do flip-flops, unless she is the one who never bores him, never wearies him and never fails him, he will find her big bank account or her big pay-envelope only a thorn in his side.

Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

"ONLY A ROUTINE MATTER"

It's one of those days. Humdrum . . . drab. Not even one tough, exciting problem to break the monotony. Just petty, picky little chores. Days like this seem wasted. They wear down your morale more than would a riot.

Elsie Robinson

Yet, through all the colorless hours, one splendid phrase has gone streaming like a great banner . . . carrying me along in spite of myself—

"It was purely a routine matter"—six simple words, yet they voice as brave an act as America has ever seen.

Dr. William Hallock Park, director of New York City's Department of Health laboratories, said those six words. Dr. Park is a brilliant, happy healthy man. He has friends and loved ones . . . a noteworthy position . . . in short, every reason to wish to live.

AWFUL RISK TAKEN

Yet, if the "routine matter" to which he refers proceeds to its not improbable conclusion, he may, even as I write, have quietly relinquished all these good things and passed, forever, from the places and the people that he loves.

And with him, there may have gone certain others—all warm with life, all eager and proud a few hours since—three of them women.

Six people, each with an abundant life awaiting. Yet, quietly, casually, each one of those persons plunged a needle into his or her arm. In that needle lay the possibility of most hideous death or infirmity—infantile paralysis.

What heroic resolution could induce a normal human being to plunge the poisoned secretion of a dying ape into his clean flesh?

No heroic resolution at all. To them, as stated before, it was a "routine matter." Annually, America is swept by an epidemic of infantile paralysis which leaves in its wake a ghastly record of blasted hopes, broken hearts, twisted bodies.

At present thousands are living in dread of such a fate. If only a preventive serum can be discovered! But how can one be sure that such a serum is preventive. There is only one way—by testing it on human bodies.

CHILL AT TEST

What would that test mean to you or to me? We chill at the thought. But to those six people it required no more determination, no more fortitude, than they use every day of their lives.

They were brave men when the test came, not because they decided at that moment to be brave, but because they had always been brave . . . they had always done the thing that had to be done—regardless.

They did not become heroic at 9 p. m. July 12, 1934. They became heroic through a lifetime of petty chores, forgotten sacrifices, unrecorded decisions, "humdrum days that seem wasted."

"A matter of routine"—words like a great, brave banner streaming above the slow, monotonous progress of life. Suddenly, through tears, I saw that heroism is always like that. Not born of a splendid impulse—but the fruit of forgotten things.

Christ hanging on the Cross—Socrates drinking the hemlock—Joan burning at the stake—Madame Curie bending over a death-dealing ray. They live forever through their splendid martyrdom because courage has become "a matter of routine."

WHEN THE BABY SLEEPS

Jean came visiting today and brought her babe along.
When I got home at five o'clock I wondered what was wrong,
For mother "shushed" me at the door and Janet didn't run
With shouts of glee to welcome me as she so long has done.
The maids on tiptoe walked about. My flesh began to creep,
Until they said, "Don't make a noise! The baby's fast asleep."

I started in to hum a song. They "shushed" me once again,
And mother said: "In all our lives we'll never train the men.
They must go banging round the house and clomping up the stairs
And pulling open dresser drawers and toppling over chairs.
They're such a careless, clattering lot! 'Twould make a woman weep
To have 'em in the house at all when baby's fast asleep."

They "shushed" me when I dropped my book, they "shushed" me when I spoke,
They "shushed" me when I started in to tell a little joke.
The mother did her needle-point and never said a word,
And Jean went out of doors to shoo away a singing bird,
But by and by I understood that silence all must keep Throughout those precious moments when the baby's fast asleep.

It was a lesson once I'd learned but strangely had forgot.
It seems so many years since we have had a little tot,
For Janet's grown to girlhood now and races in and out
And no one ever thinks to tiptoe softly round about.
Thus back to me came memories which Time had buried deep
When Nellie used to whisper: "Sshh! The baby's fast asleep!"

Human Side of the News; King John's Treasure

By Edwin C. Hill

Through a period of years, cable tolls on stories of unsuccessful treasure hunts probably would mount up to a sizable treasure.

From the days of Herod, who went treasure hunting, down to this newspaper deadline, tales of buried treasure have been the endless balance brought forward of folklore and legend.

They have impelled men to delve into the earth and search the depths of the sea—and to dream endless dreams, for here is the golden domain of old romance.

An English lawsuit headlines again the sunken treasure of King John, sunk in the Wash, a large tidal bay on the shore of Norfolk, in 1216.

Sir Frederick Ponsonby sues the American treasure hunter, the wealthy James A. Herbert Boone, charging violation of contract. Three distinguished British archaeologists deserted Mr. Boone when he brought in diviners, with divining rods.

The search goes on, and it may outlast the Magna Charta, which came out of the quicksand just as King John's gold sank into it. For the symbol of gold has been, in the story of man, more enduring than any parchment.

All the gold in the world could be contained in a fair sized room, but around it circle all the vast and planetary abstractions of credit and exchange.

The Knights of Runnymede knew nothing about the gold standard—we have much in common—but they did know about gold, as did Ghengis Khan and Attila and Solomon before them and Sir Montagu Norman after them.

Old Fafnir, sitting on his Rheingold, knew what it was all about. Then, as now, legend and reality overlapped in this domain. Mr. Boone's archaeologists are of today and his diviners of yesterdays, but the Niebelungen Lied carries down into the white lights of today.

Down in lower Austria, they are all excited because they think they have found, thirty feet underground, some of Siegfried's gold.

When Rodmar, the giant, found his son slain, he demanded gold sufficient to cover the boy's skin. The gold was wrested from a demi-god, but the demi-god cursed it and decreed that it should sink into the ground, and blast with ill-fortune whoever touched it. Why this curse so often laid on hidden gold? Why did the story of the curse spring to life so readily when the treasure was taken from King Tut's tomb?

But the curse deters none. Not only footless adventurers, but the rich and great—like Mr. Boone—are as eager to go treasure hunting as any pop-eyed boy who has been reading Treasure Island. Just after the war, an imposing group of powerful New York bankers sunk many thousands of dollars into a syndicate to bring up from the sea bullion and coin sunk a century or more ago.

I happened to talk to one of them at the time. There was a febrile excitement in the man never stirred by his work-a-day gleaning of millions in the stock market.

From time to time, elaborate plans are formed to raise the British frigate Hussar, sunk in Hell Gate Sound with $4,000,000 worth of gold brought here to pay British soldiers in the Revolutionary War.

In Delaware Bay is the De-Break with $5,000,000; off Nantucket Light is the Republic with $2,000,000; in San Francisco, the Rio Janeiro with $9,000,000.

The Mediterranean and the Adriatic would have a floor of golden sequins if the treasure of the sunken ships could be strewn about. The Spanish Main, Central America, Mexico, Bolivia and Southern California are the favored dream lands of the treasure hunters.

In the days of Spain's rising power there was a vast amount of loose bullion shifting about these countries, and the doubloons and the moidores of the pirates weren't altogether mythical. No man can trace to their sources the legends which live down through the decades and the centuries.

For many years, old desert rats have been quitting the sagebrush trail and burrowing into the Cocopah mountains, back of San Diego, California. Almost esoteric seem the tales which are whispered around the treasure hunters.

Somewhere in the Cocopahs is buried, so runs the tale, vast loot from the early days of the Spanish occupation, but beyond that no one can glean anything definite. But somewhere out in the chapparal, one old Hassayampa whispers to another, and draws a map on the sand and off they go.

Away back in 1795, three colonial youths on Oak Island, off the Coast of Nova Scotia, found the earth disturbed under an oak tree. They uncovered a cavity, floored with stout boards. Under this was another—and still another.

All summer they worked, without coming to an end of the sunken plank compartments. Various difficulties and hazards drove them away. Years later others tried to fathom the labyrinth, but failed.

But there ought to be an injunction, or something against Mr. Boone hunting King John's treasure. He established "Fen Research, Ltd." That's no way to go after buried treasure!

Lobby-Labelled Law Only Hinders Philippines

By James T. Williams, Jr.

According to Manila dispatches the Philippine Constitutional convention has opened "amid stormy scenes." This was to be expected. It is the inevitable result of the legislative monstrosity under which the Philippine people are compelled to proceed. This monstrosity—the so-called Philippine Independence Act—was lobbied through the late and unlamented 73d Congress by the hirelings of a coalition of special interests dominated by the sugar trust.

Under this iniquitous law the following procedure is forced upon the Philippine people:

They must first accept the provisions of the law either by the vote of the Philippine Legislature or a convention called for that purpose. The act has already been accepted by the Legislature.

They must then formulate a constitution, this is the task upon which the convention now in session at Manila has just entered. There is no time limit upon completion of the next step.

Having drawn up a constitution and incorporated in it certain provisions which the law requires shall continue in effect until the final withdrawal of American sovereignty 10, 20 or even more years hence, the proposed organic law must then be submitted to the President of the United States for approval. If he finds that it conforms to the provisions of the Philippine act he must so certify. If he finds that it does not he must so inform the Philippine convention through the governor general and indicate the changes which he desires made.

ONE OF MANY JOKERS

These exchanges between the President and the Philippine Constitutional convention may go on indefinitely but until an agreement has been arrived on the provisions of the proposed constitution the status quo in the islands must continue.

When, as and if the President finally gets from Manila a constitution that he is willing to approve and certify, the Philippine people are then authorized to hold an election for ratification or rejection of the constitution.

Here we come to one of the many jokers in this iniquitous law.

The question really to be voted on at this election will be the ratification or rejection of a new form of insular government, not the question of whether the Philippine people really desire to be rid entirely of the protection of American sovereignty.

But under the law lobbied through Congress by the sugar trust and its sordid allies, it is provided that "this vote," which is a vote for a new form of insular government, "shall be deemed an expression of the will of the people of the Philippine Islands in favor of Philippine independence."

As a matter of fact the new form of insular government for which the proposed constitution will provide, gives the Philippine people more autonomy than they now have. This would involve less American control than is now exercised over their affairs. For example, they would be permitted to elect their governor general, who is now appointed by the President.

The ultimate issue which will be determined by this vote for more autonomy will be that of complete independence from the United States in the indefinite future. No more dishonest and unfair plebiscite was ever forced upon a dependent people by the government pledged before the world to protect them from such injustice.

Under this crooked procedure forced upon the Philippine people by the lobby-ridden forces which passed this law the average island voter cannot foresee the ultimate economic consequences of complete divorce from the United States in the indefinite future. He cannot possibly anticipate what a majority vote for the constitution providing for a new form of insular government, pending final separation, will finally inflict upon the Philippine people in the years to come.

U. S. RESPONSIBLE

This cowardly procedure is not less unfair to the American people. It condemns them to occupy for an indefinite number of years a position of responsibility in the Far East beyond their authority to discharge. Throughout the time that will elapse between the setting up of the temporary insular government, for which the proposed constitution provides, and the final withdrawal of American sovereignty from the Philippines, the United States will be wholly responsible for the conduct of the Philippine government, for the defense of the Philippine Islands against revolution from within or aggression from without, but its authority to discharge that responsibility will be very much less than it is today.

The "stormy scenes" with which the Philippine convention started will doubtless prove to be only the shadow of more serious storms yet to break.
